COSTLY CREDIT CARDS

Many of us have been told that we use something every day because it is safer, faster and more convenient. There is a cost to this luxury of modern technology that needs to be realized. As a manager of a small business here in town I can tell you that at the end of the year 2013, our profits were cut down by the usual suspects — wages, energy expenses and maintenance — but what surprised me most was the charges incurred by customers using their debit/credit cards. In fact, we were charged nearly $24,000 last year.

These cards are easy to hold and use but the benefits virtually end there. With technology advancing at a breakneck pace these cards make us more susceptible to identity theft and hackers. Also, I challenge you to have a faster transaction anywhere when using your card as opposed to paying in cash. Cash will win every time. Furthermore, all the lovely local businesses in town have to pay a hefty price for this so-called convenience. If you really want to support local and small businesses in the future, use cash only.

Why allow the banks to run off with even more of our money while doing a jumping heel-click of happiness while the ever-reliable greenback sits in our pockets? Cash is fast, cash is safe and cash saves businesses money.

I use my cards when I pay bills, get gas at Chevron or for the inevitable trip to Target to get cheap bedding. Otherwise, at my favorite local shops, I will always use money, real money. This way as I shop local, I'm not lining the pockets of those who take so much already and would prefer a society where nothing "one of a kind" exists, nothing homegrown can be profitable and monopoly is the only game on the shelf.

PURPOSE OF SIDEWALKS

Regarding Alley Valkyrie's Oct. 23 Viewpoint where she complains that merchants are misusing the cities "outdoor café" permit program, is she perhaps aware that the main purpose of sidewalks (note the sub word "walk") is to allow pedestrians to move from place to place on them? The misuse of them by vagrants, including sleepers, boozers, druggies, panhandlers, buskers and the like is not a protected right.

The fact that businesses have to resort to a form of subterfuge illustrates the problem, which is that the rights of vagrants have, in the minds of some, superseded the rights of business establishments to conduct business.

If I owned a downtown business I would consider getting an "outdoor café" permit as essential as having lights and plumbing, even if I didn't set up so much as a chair on the sidewalk.

TWISTED COVERAGE

I've noticed a trend in recent articles or the lack thereof in The Register-Guard that seems to support the timber industry. The one that is particularly interesting was covering biologist Tyrone Hayes' lecture Oct. 23 on his research and findings on the herbicide atrazine, developed by Syngenta and used by the timber industry. It is extremely biased and misleading. The title is "Controversy surrounds UO speaker." Near the end of the article it states:

Then Forbes magazine jumped into the fray, labeling the New Yorker article a "puff piece," and asserting that Hayes was "almost completely discredited (until) the New Yorker piece breathed new life into his fading career." The Forbes article said Syngenta had asked Hayes to "stop spreading lies." The UO will pay Hayes $400 for his appearances, and will also cover all his expenses, including meals,

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF EUGENE CITY HALL

A Partial City Hall

COUNCIL MAJORITY IGNORES THE BIGGER PICTURE

Councilor Alan Zelenka's Oct. 16 Viewpoint was a good summary of the Eugene City Council majority's rationalizations about tearing down and replacing City Hall. The smaller building would be more energy efficient. We wouldn't need to consolidate city services in the future at City Hall because no one was complaining and people were getting used to running around town.

We didn't need to factor in the continuing cost of rent and utilities, presently at $1.2 million per year, for space that now houses those services. It was OK to tear down the old building and a block of valuable structured parking before there was a firm site plan and a real budget for the leveled block. As a substitute for good planning, Zelenka offered hope that something good would turn up to happen there. Maybe a future courthouse? Maybe something?

It was clear that he and his supporters had closed their minds to the many important advantages of rebuilding that were brought before the City Council by a group of expert citizens, who would instead remodel and rebuild the present City Hall. And now that the old blistered cedar fins are down, some of that promise and potential is showing through.

I think it's important to say again that Zelenka's replacement City Hall is only a partial City Hall. It would house few services for the community. What we are getting under his leadership is a council chamber, a meeting room and offices for the mayor, the councilors, the city manager and manager's staff, and a shelled-in fourth floor for some city services in the future. I believe it's important to bring back the majority of city departments to one location. That would accomplish, using his terms, a City Hall that was accessible, functional and a center of community.

Without a consolidating (and costly) second phase to the present proposal, all we are getting is an administrative or ceremonial center that covers 8 percent of an entire city block. By not tearing down the existing building, parking and council chamber structure, we'd have a second phase in reserve — space that could incrementally accommodate returned services.

Zelenka and his colleagues are too willing to ignore this problem and simply do as all politicians do, "kick the can down the road" for our future leaders to contend with.

Sorry, but I continue to think we need smarter and better planning.

Otto P. Poticha, FAIA, is a Eugene architect and member of Save City Hall. More photos of City Hall with its façade removed can be found on our website.

airfare and hotel, the UO said.

After hearing Hayes' talk Friday night and learning the details of his decades of scientific research that is peer reviewed and published in prestigious journals, it is obvious that his work is worthy and valid. He referenced the R-G article title often in his presentation. Where is the controversy? He kept implying.

It would have been a balanced article if the R-G included information from independent scientists on herbicides and not just the corporation that would be harmed if its product were banned.

The way the article ends implies the UO is spending money to pay for a liar. I wonder if this is because Hayes is helping to make the case that the timber industry, along with big agriculture, has been given carte blanche to use harmful poisons, which hurt amphibians, birds, wildlife and humans at very low dosages, and the R-G gets big bucks in advertisement dollars from logging moguls to support them no matter the consequences for everyone and everything else.

STONEWALLED BY JUDGE

On Oct. 6, Lane County Circuit Court Judge Charles Carlson decided, for the second time, that the Local Food System Ordinance of Lane County failed to meet pre-election requirements. In February, a Benton County judge ruled that an almost identical ordinance did, in fact, comply. The Benton folks are now gathering signatures to qualify for the May 2015 election, but here in Lane we are being stonewalled by this judge. What's up with Carlson?

Judge Carlson's decision is a victory for the corporations that profit from GMO agriculture in Lane County. It is a setback for local farmers, food-related businesses and residents who are personally and economically invested in local agricultural products — both conventional and organic.

This decision is a roadblock to county residents' access to the initiative system — one in which citizens have the right to write laws and put them to a vote of the people. In the absence of a law protecting local farms, corporations like Syngenta and Monsanto will continue to bring more genetically engineered food varieties to the Willamette Valley.

However, Support Local Food Rights is undeterred and already planning next steps for our efforts to protect our county's food system. We remain committed to advocating for a law elevating the community's right to decide what our

HELPING VULGAR BULLIES

While there is no doubt Alley Valkyrie's heart is in the right place [Viewpoint, 10/23], I find that it has been mislead and fooled. She has been an outspoken advocate of the homeless, who need a leader, but she is not leading them to any sort of long-term solution. Instead of finding a permanent solution (real jobs, real homes and useful help for the mentally ill), she chooses to demand that taxpayers provide public property so that they can live in tents. The only thing created was a large, dangerous and unsanitary camp that attracted more homeless people to the area, spread communicable disease, violence, drug use and was less attractive than a refugee camp.

Now she wants to allow aggressive, vulgar bullies to loiter around businesses, driving customers away. I have given up on trying to take my family downtown. I have gotten in several near confrontations with these bullies because I stand up to them and call them on their low-class behavior.

The so-called poetry reader Valkyrie refers to was not harmless, but like the rest of the Broadway loiterers, was very rude, interruptive and confrontational. Anyone who goes downtown with his or her family to have a nice afternoon or evening knows better. The businesses and police are only doing what needs to be done to save the businesses downtown and to keep the bullies in check. These folks are not the poor, downtrodden, weak victims of society.

If Eugene wants to protect and encourage the cool downtown vibe, then it needs to encourage the folks to become productive members of society or to keep moving along. Maybe instead of trying to bring the businesses down to the "buskers and panhandlers" level, Valkyrie should try to bring the buskers and panhandlers up out of the rut they have dug themselves into and to help them become productive members of society like the rest of us.

CELL TOWER INVASION

The city of Eugene has legal footing but does it have the political will to protect neighborhoods from intrusive cell phone towers? Eugene's telecommunications ordinance needs a major overhaul, and the city needs help. Eugeneans must let the City Council know that not one more residential neighborhood will be sacrificed.

Neighborhoods have one at a time fought the siting of towers near their homes. It can be an expensive proposition — just ask the neighbors near the Oakway Golf Course AT&T site. There needs to be a comprehensive solution.

Until this is done, Eugene should at least be utilizing its one protective provision — mandatory independent peer review of technical information at the expense of the applicant. This is not a comprehensive solution, but complying with its own code would be a good start.

If I were a neighbor in the Oakway area or near the AT&T Rest Haven site on Willamette, I would be seeking restitution from the city for legal fees and wondering why my own attorneys didn't raise this non-compliance issue for appeal purposes.

City Council has tentatively set a work session on this issue. Radio frequency radiation is nobody's friend and afflicts some, especially children, more than others.

PEOPLE OVER PROFITS

I was shocked when my co-worker told me he thought he was going to have to sell his house last summer to finance weekly chemotherapy for the life-threatening auto-immune condition his son contracted as a grad student in Chile. Nearing retirement after 30-plus years as a project manager and IT professional, this would change his plans significantly.

Turns out the 2010 Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (Obamacare) covers his son's expensive treatment. Now that's good news! But it's still not enough. We need a health care system that supports people when they are faced with catastrophic, expensive or chronic illness, not a system that forces people to lose their financial independence after a lifetime of public service.

We need universal publicly funded health care that prioritizes people over profit. Every other industrialized country in the world has a form of health care that everyone pays into and provides for a healthier, stable society. What are we waiting for? Some say our health care system is number one, but studies show it costs more per person than in any other country, and is 37th in medical outcomes. We can do better. You shouldn't have to sell your house to pay for health care!

RAILROADS GETTING WORSE

Several recent letters complaining about noise from railroads — I agree. Some 150 years ago, every city wanted the railroad to go through town. Now a lot of people just want the railroads to go away. All complaints fall on deaf ears.

The railroads spend most of their time, money and energy "hiding" behind federal statutes. And they have no interest in being a good citizen, contributing to society or doing any long-term planning to make this a great nation and a better place to live.

Every other source of noise in society has done just the opposite — and for the most part is improving every year. While the railroads get worse and worse. What could the railroads do if they "came out of the closet" and stopped relying on the federal government? We would welcome them as member of society along with the airlines, trucking, shipping, etc. This is where the railroads belong. They do not belong inside of a bureaucracy.

With modern technology and the cooperation of local citizens and authorities — the federal statutes and the federal bureaucrats could be done away with. I have been debating this subject with U.S. Rep. Peter DeFazio since 2006. Pete's position is that the railroads are a national resource — I agree — but they are also a national disaster by increase in medical costs by the noise and lack of sleep. It's time for Pete and the RRs to wise up.

*Frank Skipton

A FAILED SYSTEM

I'm continually amazed at how our medical system fails to serve the people who need it the most. I'm very concerned about how we treat individuals with mental health disorders like schizophrenia, bipolar issues, psychosis, autism, depression, dementia, personality disorders — the list goes on and on. Unfortunately, many of these folks are homeless, live in poverty or just can't get it together or afford the co-pays and high deductibles that come along with the cheaper insurance plans. Without proof of insurance, no hospital will take them except on an emergency basis.

Emergency room visits are the most expensive way to provide care. Who pays? We all do through taxes and higher and higher insurance premiums. Think how much better care these folks would get and how much cheaper it would be for us if we all backed an "improved Medicare for all" health care program — there'd be far fewer ER visits, fewer 911 calls and, most importantly, these patients would be able to access quality referrals to the mental health services they need. Please call your state legislators and let them know we need to implement an "improved Medicare for all" program. Do this — now!

EX-COUNTY ADMINISTRATOR CLEARED, BUT LEIKEN AND BOZIEVICH OBJECT

Former county administrator Liane Inkster (previously Richardson) was fired by Lane County more than a year ago, but questions from her uneasy departure still linger, most recently due to a letter from the Oregon State Bar (OSB) clearing her in a disciplinary investigation.

The bar's investigation is the third investigation — or possibly the fourth, according to the letter — into Inkster's actions. Commissioners Sid Leiken and Jay Bozievich responded to EW's inquiry about the letter with a statement asking that the investigation be reopened. OSB's probe stemmed from an article in the R-G after Inkster nominated herself for a position on the bar's Disciplinary Board.

Inkster wasn't fired at all; she left after a "contractual dispute," the bar's letter to Inkster says. The April 22 letter, recently obtained by EW, also says that the County Commission's then-chair (Leiken) and vice chair (Bozievich) "knew and approved" of the changes in Inkster's compensation that led to the termination of her job with Lane County.

Inkster had lobbied to raise her salary from $152,345 to $175,656 at a time when the commission was asking taxpayers to approve a county jail levy. When that request came to light, and the proposed raises for her and County Counsel Stephen Dingle were tabled, Inkster then made changes to her take-home pay.

According to OSB's letter, written by Assistant Disciplinary Counsel Mary Cooper, the board "wanted, for political reasons, to delay discussions" of a raise. Inkster told Cooper she followed a suggestion from a commissioner to sell back some of her sick leave time (what the county calls "time management") and convert the money to cash. Inkster sold far more than the county allows.

After another employee questioned the changes and hired an attorney, "the board began to back away from its involvement in the situation," the letter says.

When the allegations of impropriety with Inkster's pay surfaced in the summer of 2013, the county hired Greg Olson of USO Consulting and Investigation to look into Inkster, and he concluded that she was "untruthful." But according to the bar's letter, "the board later conducted a full independent audit" of Inkster, and it "concluded that [Inkster] did not act fraudulently and that the board chair and vice chair knew and approved of the changes in [her] compensation."

Leiken and Bozievich call the mention of the audit "curious" in their statement. "No audit was done of Ms. Inkster's misdeeds," they write. The commissioners also note that neither Olson's investigation nor an investigation by an outside district attorney "concluded any involvement or justification" for Inkster's selling more of her time management "by any member of the Board of Commissioners."

The bar's letter primarily notes an interview with Inkster, but Kateri Walsh, director of OSB media relations, tells EW the attorney who conducted the investigation reviewed both Olson's and the DA's reports.

The bar concluded that it was plausible Inkster did not remember an email telling her she had sold too much sick time when the investigator asked her about it, and cited the district attorney's decision not to file charges. Leiken and Bozievich say the DA did not file charges because Inkster had agreed to pay the money back and had already been terminated by the county.

Walsh says that the "Disciplinary Counsel's office will take a look at the file and if it appears that there was evidence that did not get a thorough review, we will likely either re-evaluate the matter, or take it to the State Professional Responsibility Review for consideration."

Neither the county nor the other media covering the furor over Inkster's nomination to the disciplinary board last March apparently asked for a copy of the April 22 letter dismissing the complaint. Walsh says, "We never received a complaint regarding Inkster from the commission or anyone in Lane County." She adds, "We opened the investigation ourselves based on media reports," and OSB typically copies complainants on progress in a disciplinary investigation. — Camilla Mortensen

IT'S ABOUT TIME

BY DAVID WAGNER

The extended summer dry spell has turned into a warm rainy period. No frost yet, nor even any really cold nights, although the average first frost date is long past. It means the leaves on the bigleaf maples haven't been triggered to produce the golden color seen in most years. Instead, the dry leaves just turn brown and fall off while the rest are still green. The tar spot fungus doesn't have its usual green halo on a golden background because its spores are maturing early, sustained by the whole green leaf.

Our nasturtiums are going crazy this fall, sprawling vigorously over the garden beds where the cucumbers used to grow. The cucumbers, like the zucchini, succumbed to mildew soon after the rains began. It is not often that the nasturtiums aren't taken down by aphids at the end of the summer.

The late warm season allows us to enjoy little, edible bouquets that last a few days inside.

The flock of turkeys I wrote about back in August is now miles away from its nesting grounds in our neighborhood. This flock is readily identifiable by the solitary albino in it. At least one of the flock is wandering about on its own. The sounds of different waterfowl tell us the winter migrants are starting to take up residence in Delta Ponds.

Winter annuals are flourishing. The chickweed is a delicious, welcome sight. Bittercress, earliest of our garden weeds, says we had better start pulling rosettes before the new year begins.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS ADDRESS SEXUAL VIOLENCE AT YOUTH SYMPOSIUM

With the UO facing growing scrutiny over sexual violence among students this year, local high school students are convening to confront the problem early. On Nov. 10-11, the Youth Empowerment Symposium (YES) will gather young people in Lane County to talk openly about domestic violence, consent and other issues involving sexuality.

"The entire event is free. We wanted to make it as accessible as possible," says Elliot Glaser-Flynn, an LCC student and project manager for YES. The symposium, now in its second year, features a series of workshops covering transgender awareness, healthy and unhealthy relationships and positive body image.

'I think knowledge and being aware of these things before they happen is a huge part of prevention.'

— ELLIOT GLASER-FLYNN, PROJECT MANAGER

Glaser-Flynn says attendees are mostly teenagers, and last year's symposium attracted 90 people. Glaser-Flynn says he's expecting between 100 to 150 attendees this year. The event takes place at First United Methodist Church in Eugene and will also feature breakfast and lunch both days, with a performance by Grrrlz Rock! on the second day.

One of the workshops, titled "Is It Best to Say Yes?" addresses the definition of consent while positing scenarios to help students understand the meaning of yes and no. Another workshop, led by high school students from Network Charter School's sexual health class, delves into issues of abuse in relationships, teaching students how to recognize and address unhealthy behaviors both in their own relationships and in those of others.

"The big key word is awareness, and that's why we have workshops about sexual assault," Glaser-Flynn says. "I think knowledge and being aware of these things before they happen is a huge part of prevention."

POLLUTION UPDATE

The city of Eugene recently sent the following Eugene businesses "pre-enforcement notices" for violating the Clean Water Act by failing to conduct required monitoring of industrial stormwater discharges from their facilities: Al's Sheet Metal, Apex Machinery, Armur Coatings, Bulk Handling Systems (two locations), Mohawk Metal Company, Rolling Frito-Lay Sales, The Truss Company, Tyree Oil and Zip-O-Log Mills (two locations). These violations are being referred to Oregon Department of Environmental Quality's Office of Compliance and Enforcement for formal enforcement, which may include assessment of monetary penalties.

A Whiteaker neighborhood building and land at 252 Lawrence St., across the street from Crux Rock Climbing Gym, has been sold to Rick Wright, the CEO of Market of Choice, to become an events center, and we heard from one small business being evicted, Bohemia Café & Apothecary. Co-owner Felicia Parra-Colden tells us the eviction was given with short notice, but she was able to negotiate more time to relocate. "We are creating a healing space with massage therapists and herbal consultants with our tea house and apothecary," she says, at a location to be announced, likely in the Whiteaker. The other owner of the business is Andrea Magdalena Garcia. The shop has been there for three and a half years and herb shops have occupied the space for 18 years. Parra-Colden says she and her partner are trying to raise money for the relocation. Call 343-0535.

Golden Arts Healing Collective is a new business at 395 W. Broadway offering massage, naturopathy, herbology, therapeutic movement, tea and tisane, and owned and operated by Brenda Wilson, LMT, Michelle Ditter, LMT, Rachel Hess, ND, and Deb Vitello, LMT. "We feature a small movement space for therapeutic movement lessons and small class size," Wilson says. Golden Arts will have its grand opening 5 to 8 pm Nov. 7 during the First Friday ArtWalk, with music by Mood Area 52 and artwork by Portland Artist Kathy Brock. Call 743-6131 or find them on Facebook.

50/50 Tanks & Tees is a new resale T-shirt shop at 277 W. 8th Ave. The shop specializes in tank tops and T-shirts, sizes XS to SL, at a flat price of $10, according to owner Loren Hill. The business also has an art gallery with art rotating monthly and will be open for First Friday ArtWalk this week, with music by Brahminy Underground. Phone number is 232-2372 and the shop is on Facebook.

Karen DeBraal opened Wise Turtle Acupuncture at 807 A St., in Springfield in late September. "I am the only acupuncturist in Springfield," she says, and she will be joining the Springfield Second Friday Art Walk Nov. 14, featuring the flower petal art of Springfield artist Subongkot Pethnuil. That day will also be her official grand opening. Phone number is 731-1466 and website is wiseturtleacupuncture.com.

The McKenzie Cider and Craft Beer Festival and benefit will begin at 5 pm Friday, Nov. 7, and continue from noon to 11 pm Saturday, Nov. 8, at the Willamalane Center, 250 S. 32nd St. in Springfield. Tickets are $15 at the door. Featured will be more than 70 craft brews from Oregon, Washington and California and live entertainment. See mcbf.com.

Perugino is hosting a free Q&A Kabbalah Hour at 6 pm Monday, Nov. 10, at 767 Willamette St. Discussion will be led by Shmuel Shalom Cohen of Conscious Torah. Cohen spent 10 years in Israel studying Judaism and Kabbalah and came back to Eugene to "inspire peace, harmony, healing and joy in individuals, community and the world through teaching Judaism as a spiritual path to wholeness." He gives classes and does one-on-one tutoring, and is starting a monthly series of free drop-in classes and events. See conscioustorah.com or call 514-2571.

The national Giving Tuesday holiday campaign is coming to Eugene and Springfield this fall as a benefit for local nonprofit cat rescue efforts. West Coast Dog and Cat Rescue is joining Giving Tuesday for a kickoff fundraiser from noon to 10 pm Thursday, Nov. 6, at Ninkasi Brewery, 272 Van Buren St. Call 225-4955 or visit westcoastdogandcat.org.

McMenamins North Bank pub has gotten a makeover with a South Sea Islands theme. The Kapu Hut evokes Polynesia elements with bamboo walls and antique masks from Papua New Guinea, Japan and Africa. The "soft opening" of the renovated bar was this week with a grand opening still to come. The bar and restaurant is located on the river and bike path at 22 Club Road. Call 343-5622. See photos on our blog.

Looking for an interesting job? We hear BRING Recycling is hiring a new coordinator for its annual Home and Garden Tour that happens each September. It's only quarter-time but looks like fun and a big challenge. Find a job description at wkly.ws/1ua. Deadline to apply is Dec. 5.

PHILOSOPHER TO DISCUSS HOMELESSNESS, TOWN AND GOWN DIVIDE AT UO

Everybody sleeps. But for people who are unhoused, sleeping can be controversial and even illegal, due to city ordinances that ban lying down, sleeping or camping.

Those ordinances might be based on bad philosophy, according to Chad Kautzer, an assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Colorado, who argues that such ordinances outlaw activities that are fundamental to survival.

Kautzer is giving a talk Thursday, Nov. 6, entitled "Homelessness, Security and the Politics of Dys-Appearance," and will attempt to start some new discussions about homelessness.

Kautzer says university folks tend to talk about issues "without getting involved with people," so he says he hopes his talk will help bridge the divide between campus and the rest of Eugene. "It's important for people on campus to go out to the community to learn from the community," he says.

Kautzer calls rules like Eugene's ban on urban camping "the criminalization of homelessness" and says other solutions are needed. A Homeless Bill of Rights, which has become law in several states, including Rhode Island and Connecticut, would be a step in the right direction.

Eric de Buhr, executive director of Community Supported Shelters, calls the event "a good first step" but says he remains skeptical about the university's efforts. "You can't learn sitting in a classroom about a true, real phenomenon that's out in the world," de Buhr says.

De Buhr is among those invited to a roundtable with Kautzer on Friday. The group will also include Eugene Mayor Kitty Piercy and Springfield Mayor Christine Lundberg. UO philosophy professor Naomi Zack says the roundtable is by invitation only in order to keep the group small so they can "try to come up with things the UO could actually implement."

The talk is sponsored by the UO Community Philosophy Institute. Zack, who is the chair of the institute, says she hopes that philosophy can offer insight into the complex problem of homelessness. "We're going into winter, and a number of people are going to suffer in ways that are unimaginable to us who have ordinary lives," Zack says. "Maybe we can spark practical solutions."

Kautzer's talk is 4 pm Thursday, Nov. 6, at the Knight Library Browsing Room, UO campus. The talk is free and open to the public. — Daemion Lee

SLANT

• It was ugly out there across America Tuesday night, but let's give a cheer for Oregon, Washington and California, the left bank. Our state voted for legalized marijuana, for equal rights for women and against top-two primaries. We made some mistakes such as voting against increased student financial aid and denying legal driving to immigrants. We held the Democratic Legislature and supported reasonable people like Phil Barnhart, Peter DeFazio, Jeff Merkley and John Kitzhaber. And now it's time for Willamette Week and The Oregonian to stop whining about Cylvia Hayes so she and the governor can sort out their lives and carry on their work for the global environment. As for GMO labeling in Oregon, it's remarkable that the vote was so close considering the outrageous amount of money spent to defeat it.

Republicans are gloating over their wins in Congress, but Congress has been paralyzed for years and Republicans are unlikely to do much going forward other than position themselves for the big elections in 2016. (Hey Repubs, you broke it, you bought it.) They don't dare vote for anything that will offend their conservative base. Meanwhile, four states Tuesday voted to raise their minimum wage, contrary to Republican ideology. Change will come from the bottom up.

• Mark Harris told City Club of Eugene Oct. 31 that Oregon had been a Southern state in the Northwest, and he made us ponder how much of the country is now a "Southern state." Harris is a counselor and instructor at LCC and has long been a leader in this community on issues of race and diversity. He was sharing the stage with Judith Mowry, policy analyst with the city of Portland, who said a disproportionate percentage of the homeless are people of color. Race was on the ballot this election from constant attacks on President Obama to overblown Ebola scares to limiting of voting rights, even allowed by some courts. It's so important that Harris and Mowry and City Club keep telling this story.

• This week's Best of Eugene is one of the most spectacular issues we do each year. It's our way of celebrating and flaunting all the great reasons we choose to live here instead of all the other obvious places, such as Paris, Hawaii or Lakeview. Thousands of our readers take a chunk out of their valuable time to fill out ballots on paper or online. No big surprise. Eugeneans really care — about our businesses, our politics, our arts, the naughty stuff that goes on when nobody's looking (wait, that's our Love issue). Despite speculation to the contrary, the winners are chosen by our readers, not our staff cabal, and ballot stuffing doesn't get by us. Well, hardly ever. Thanks to our Special Issues Editor Amy Schneider for overseeing this huge project. We hope you enjoy it and be sure to vote next year, and even suggest new categories. Best pole dancer? Best school janitor? Best jail guard?

• As long as we are touting what's best in town, we thought we'd toot our own kazoo. EW grabbed a bundle of awards this year from the Society of Professional Journalists for 2013 writing. Sometimes we surprise ourselves with how much we can do with a small, albeit slightly warped, staff. In the SPJ Region 10 contest, which is made up of Oregon, Washington, Alaska, Idaho and Montana, Alex V. Cipolle (née Notman) nabbed first place for her first-ever ArtsHound special issue, and Camilla Mortensen's "Climate is the Disaster" took first in environmental reporting. Also in Region 10, Mortensen was third in government and political reporting for "Ire of the Tiger: the Legacy of Wayne Morse" and investigative reporting for "Trainwreck: Trainloads of Oil and Toxics in Town." Richard Kidd (aka Rick Levin) grabbed third in health reporting for his "Getting Clean in Eugene" exposé on opiates.

Jake Klonoski's "Dispatches" column took second in editorial and commentary, beating out much more experienced professional journalists and it took third in the SPJ Oregon and Southwest Washington contest. In that contest Cipolle was third in profiles for "The Magical World of Shanna Trumbly" and second in lifestyles for "The Growler Rush." Mortensen took third in environment reporting for "Climate is the Disaster," and Amy Schneider celebrated her first year on the education beat with a second place in that category for "Collapsing Schools: A Looming Earthquake Threatens to Topple Oregon Schools."

HOWARD BERKES

INVESTIGATIVE RADIO

NPR's Howard Berkes returns to his roots

His calm, measured tones discussing coal mine safety or preventable grain silo deaths can make the heart of any news geek with an NPR tote bag go pitter-pat.

National Public Radio listeners have heard Howard Berkes' voice on Morning Edition, All Things Considered and Weekend Edition and will hear that voice in the coming weeks when his latest investigation into mine safety hits the airwaves. Berkes returns to KLCC and Eugene where he got his start when he gives his talk, "Typewriter to Twitter: an NPR Reporter's Journey," at 7 pm Wednesday, Nov. 12, at 175 Knight Law Center on the UO campus.

What drew you to public radio journalism?

[Laughs] I have to go back 40 years. I had actually been interested in journalism. I was trying to figure out what do with my life. I'd had a career change; I was interested in a career change. I was working at the University of Oregon bookstore, actually, and KLCC had advertised these workshops, training sessions for volunteers. I had been listening to public radio and listening to KLCC, and I thought that might be an interesting thing to do.

I very quickly developed a strong interest in the art of radio, in the power of radio, the ability to engage listeners with active sounds and scenes. Radio is a medium you sort of see in your head, and that really grabbed me early on.

There was a freelance producer working out of KLCC at the time, M'lou Zahner Ollswang. She was very creative. In fact, she sort of created that cinema vérité, radio vérité style that other people came along and used later at NPR and public radio — the idea of narration and just sound and people's voices carrying a story.

I learned a lot from her. I saw myself more as a radio artist in the beginning, but the opportunity to make money — because I quit my job to volunteer full time at KLCC, I wasn't being paid — so the only way to make money was to sell to NPR. At first I sold news spots and then feature stories, some of which were more creative and some more newsy.

NPR cutting its environment team has been talked about a lot lately. Is that something you could speak to given your reporting on rural issues?

The truth is that, generally speaking, you could name any beat at NPR and there will be many stories beyond the reporters assigned to those beats, done by other staff reporters, done by member station reporters and freelancers. That's always been true.

I had the rural beat for 10 years, there were lots of other reporters on staff and at member stations also doing stories that fit the rural beat during that time, and that was great and that was not a bad thing. Our coverage of any particular subject is not restricted to the number of people assigned who have a title of being the beat reporter.

Your talk is going to be about the transformation of news media from "typewriter to Twitter." Are you ever nostalgic for the "old school" way of doing stories?

I'm not nostalgic for the days when in order to file a story I had to take a canning jar wrench and unscrew the mouthpiece of a pay phone. And then hook alligator clips to the pay phone and then plug that into my tape recorder to file my story.

I don't miss those days.

What technology, digital media and social media have made possible is the ability to do a lot more, more quickly. To find more sources of information more quickly. To discover more pieces of information, especially documents and data, more quickly. To file more easily. These days all we need is a recorder and a laptop and a cell phone signal, and we can file from pretty much anywhere on Earth.

There are also significant challenges that have come with new technology and digital media, not the least of which is verifying the quality of information that you get and the legitimacy of the sources that you use.

Can you tell me a little about your current project?

I'm working on something that I started exploring more than two years ago. It involves mine safety, which is something that I have focused on for the last four years on and off. In the wake of the Upper Big Branch Mine disaster in West Virginia, I got very interested in mine and workplace safety and how coal mine safety is regulated.

I started with a partner, Mine Safety and Health News. We started looking at one particular aspect of regulation. We kept asking a question: "Well, it would great if we could do X. If we could find certain kinds of data, that would be really much more meaningful if we can show there was a regulatory failure." It would also be nice to show what are the consequences of that failure. We could suggest there was a problem with enforcing the regulation, but couldn't figure out what the consequence was.

We worked on that on and off a couple years, then a year ago August, an intern, Anna Boiko-Weyrauch, a grad student at the University of Missouri journalism school, started at NPR, and she specialized in computer-assisted data reporting. She was assigned to me, and I was working on this project full time. We showed her what data was available, government-provided raw data, and she was able to see a way we could demonstrate a consequence. It took us months to figure out how to do that with confidence, with data integrity, as she put it.

Having this young — in her late 20s — data-proficient reporter turned this whole project around. She has these skills that an old fart like me struggles with, but this is second nature to her. I've worked with other reporters who are also very data savvy, and have a set of skills that I never had. It's really exciting what they are able to do. It gave us the ability to demonstrate what we believe are consequences.

The ability to work with documents and to work with data makes you much more effective as a journalist. It lets you really be able to ask the most important questions you can ask. It lets you dig deep into: Are institutions doing what they're supposed to be doing? Are politicians doing what they're supposed to be doing? Are government agencies doing what they're supposed to be doing? Are corporations doing what they're supposed to be doing? Are they telling you the truth?

Data and documents are a very powerful way of discovering whether we are being lied to.

I was actually going to ask you about government transparency.

Every day, when you open up a newspaper, watch TV news or listen to NPR, there is an example of a government official, corporation or a government agency caught doing something that contradicts what they say they were all about, or they said they were doing. There's been a shift, a devolution of power, from the federal government to the states. There's actually fewer reporters covering state and local government, but more money and power has flowed to those places. People do stupid things, things to cover up their inadequacies, their greed, whatever it is. That stuff goes on, and who else is out there but journalists who try to root that stuff out, try to get at what the truth is. ■

Eugene Weekly's BEST OF EUG 2014

Oh, Eugene. We love you, we really do.

For as much as we criticize, cajole and complain, this town of ours is near and dear to our hearts. EW considers Best of Eugene a giant shout-out to our Emerald City, and this year, we're taking it a step further by using our staff picks to highlight some examples of what we think Eugene is doing right. It isn't a comprehensive list by any means, and we could fill pages extolling the accomplishments that Eugeneans have made this year: We banned neonicotinoids to help save the bees, opened a one-of-a-kind skatepark in the Whit and added another gem to our crown of award-winning breweries with Elk Horn Brewery, voted Best New Business and Best New Restaurant this year. The Eug life is a pretty good one, and we're happy to present your top picks for 2014.

BEST LOCAL UPROAR

1. New City Hall
2. EMX
3. Whoville

Eugene's full-block City Hall was considered a design masterpiece in the 1960s and an excellent example of mid-20th century Northwest modern architecture, but it was allowed to deteriorate in recent years as city staff dreamt of new offices in a shiny glass palace. The uproar over plans to demolish the still-solid, 50-year-old structure with its 120 covered parking spaces was fueled by a lively group of architects in the community who challenged the rationale for the destruction. Those councilors and Mayor Kitty Piercy, who supported tearing down the building, will likely be asked to defend their votes in the next election.

BEST HUMANITARIAN NONPROFIT

1. FOOD for Lane County 770 Bailey Hill Rd. 343-2822. foodforlanecounty.org.

3. McKenzie River Trust 1245 Pearl St. 345-2799. mckenzieriver.org.

Just as FOOD for Lane County brings home first-place honors year after year for Best Humanitarian Nonprofit, BRING Recycling is almost a sure thing for Best Enviro Organization, perhaps because BRING lets us bargain-shop to our hearts' delight while still feeling righteous about reusing and recycling. Cascadia Wildlands, from its work to try to save the Elliott State Forest to its unending commitment to hearing the howls of wolves across the state, came in second this year and, last but not least, McKenzie River Trust is a tireless advocate for our area's clean water and habitat for Oregon's flora and fauna.

BEST LOCAL HELLRAISER

1. Kevin Cronin
2. Lefty Kelleher
3. Alley Valkyrie

It's not easy being a hellraiser in this town. You work hard, piss people off and generally don't get paid, but that doesn't seem to stop anyone. The Whiteaker's Lefty Kelleher is a perennial bridesmaid-never-a-bride in this category, but that's OK — he was a winner earlier this year when he took home a year's supply of beer in the Eugene Pabst Blue Ribbon art contest. Alley Valkyrie left Eugene for Portland earlier this year, but she was in town long enough (and is still raising hell in the Eug from PDX) to make her eligible for this honor, which she won last year. Coming in as hellraiser No. 1 this year is Kevin Cronin. And just what hell does he raise? When Cronin isn't winning the Cowfish Dance Club Freek-Nite costume dance contest, "just dressed as I usually dress," he muses, he is the regional field director for the Democratic Party of Oregon. Cronin has also worked to union-organize Walmart employees, traveling the state to sign homocare and adult foster care workers up for Cover Oregon to get them access to health care, and he's worked to register Eugene's homeless population to vote. There is a ballot box at Opportunity Village, he says, and they are shooting for 85 percent turnout. Cronin is also the executive director of the nonprofit Grassroots Eugene, and for more on that, turn to our winners for Best Marijuana Dispensary.

BEST PLACE FOR SECOND CHANCES

Opportunity Village Eugene is micro-housing for more than 60 previously unhoused people that seeks to transition them to a more permanent situation. The project is a collaboration between community members lucky enough to be housed and those who need a home and shelter, consisting of 25 tiny dwellings clustered around a communal yurt. OVE seeks to make "positive changes in attitudes, policies and practices that harm the unhoused." The site is governed by its own residents, has an onsite program connecting residents with skill-based jobs and it grew out the 2011 Occupy movement when the unhoused and the housed came together and camped in a muddy park by the freeway entrance. That muddy park has blossomed into an example of innovation and cooperation for other cities around the country.

BEST NO-COST MEDICAL CARE

occupy-medical.org

Every Sunday at noon at the downtown Eugene Park Blocks (8th and Oak), rain or shine, you will see Occupy Medical's red-and-black bus surrounded by those in need of medical care, and community members are there to provide medical skills, hair cuts, food and support to anyone who needs it. Occupy Medical came to being at the Occupy Eugene camp as the medics there realized the unhoused needed more than first aid. From the beginning, OM hasn't just treated wounds; it has saved lives and soothed souls. The all-volunteer team operates on the principle that "healthcare is a basic human right that must be made accessible to everyone," and Eugene is better for it.

BEST THING ON FOUR WHEELS

whitebirdclinic.org/cahoots-faq

Life on the gritty streets of Eugene can prove nasty, brutish and unforgiving, especially for those among us dealing with addiction and/or mental health issues, which makes the rolling help provided by CAHOOTS not just laudably humane but, in this age of underfunded services and interventionist slouch, totally necessary. Short for Crisis Assistance Helping Out On The Streets, CAHOOTS is a mobile crisis team run by White Bird Clinic and linked in with the city's public safety system that roves our streets like some latter-day A-team of superheroes, ready to assist in non-criminal emergencies ranging from intoxication and overdose to street disputes and psychotic breaks. Need a ride to Buckley for a spell of detox? Hearing voices again? Not sure where you are? Hop into the big white van with the helping hands.

BEST COMMUNITY SUPPORT SYSTEM FOR GIRLS

opheliasplace.net

Growing up can be both an exciting and confusing thing, especially for girls, who face a barrage of media criticism, perfectionist ideals and an over-emphasis on their bodies instead of their minds. Fostering a sense of community and support can help, and that's exactly what Ophelia's Place does, by creating a safe place for girls to meet, work together and share experiences. This can mean anything from art classes, like Anime Club, to the Women's Advisory Council for Youth, which helps girls develop leadership skills by advising Ophelia's Place on "creative ways to make a difference," according to OP's website. Even better, OP offers affordable, sliding-scale payments, and many of its classes are free.

BEST ARTIST

1. [tie] Shanna Trumbly and Tracy Sydor trumblydesigns.com; digitallatte.com.
2. Greg Byerly
3. Katie Swenson handfashionedporcelain.com.

You love her, you really love her. And her too. That's right — painter Shanna Trumbly and photographer Tracy Sydor tied for first place. Sydor took home the title last year, and Trumbly has placed several times. The most exciting aspect of this double win that you, lovely readers, voted for is that these artists each bring something entirely different to the community. Trumbly, who illustrated the 2013 and 2014 Oregon Country Fair posters, creates hyper-detailed and heart-warming oil paintings that pay tribute to local flora and fauna, which can be seen everywhere from her little studio in the Whit to the soaring walls of Sweet Cheeks Winery. Sydor, whose "Stag Queen" photo graced the cover of our 2014 ArtsHound issue, makes the political personal in carefully crafted shoots that empower women and survivors of abuse. Together, these two with tattoo artist Greg Byerly and porcelain master Katie Swenson represent a well-balanced local art diet.

BEST PLACE TO SEE ART

2. First Friday ArtWalk lanearts.org/first-friday-artwalk.
3. Hult Center/Jacob's Gallery 1 Eugene Center. 682-5087. hultcenter.org.

She's the classy dame that sits quietly in the midst of the chaos of the UO campus. Students may pass her by, townies seem to forget about her but the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art is a brilliant gem in this Emerald City. From edgy contemporary exhibits such as Kara Walker's Tales of Slavery and Power to a rotating collection of works by iconic artists like Andy Warhol and Jean-Michel Basquiat, rainy day or not, the Schnitz' walls have important things to tell you. Not only does the museum bring in pioneering Oregon and national artists to give talks, the JSMA has pushed Eugene into the national dialogue about the arts with its Masterworks on Loan program. Go see for yourself — entry is free on First Fridays and during home games. And JSMA Director of Education Lisa Abia-Smith just nabbed the Educator of the Year award from the Oregon Art Education Association. Congrats all around!

3. SARA's Treasures 871 River Rd. 607-8892. sarasavesanimals.org.

Working to save animals is heartbreaking as well as startlingly controversial. Some weeks the staff at Greenhill probably gets as many prickles as it does praise for its efforts to rescue and rehome Eugene's pet population, from pitties to bunnies, but EW's readers voted it the Best Animal Nonprofit in a landslide. 1st Avenue Shelter (formerly Lane County Animal Services), which Greenhill runs, got its fair share of votes, too. From Bark in the Park to its Art for Animals Auction (Nov. 7), Greenhill draws the public in with its events and fundraisers. Cascades Raptor Center, which is getting a lot of attention lately via local author Melissa Hart's new book Wild Within, flaps into second place, and SARA's Treasures (Shelter Animal Resource Alliance) raises funds through its thrift store to pull animals from shelters where they might otherwise be euthanized.

BEST TATTOO/BODY MODIFICATION ARTIST

1. TC Combs
2. Splat Ter
3. Jimmy Singleton

When the shit's done right, there's a fine line between "tattoo artist" and "artist." Trent "TC" Combs of Ink'd Up Tat2 says that he "got started in tattooing because of art, and I got started in art because... I don't know. I've always liked having a pen in my hand." These days, the ink that flows from Combs' pen ranges in style from traditional rococo lettering to dynamically colored tribal patterns to religious symbolism, but he specializes in black and grey. Any way you cut it, though, you're practically guaranteed a tat that'll make you look in the mirror, flex and laughingly shake your head at your own sex appeal while whispering to yourself, "Sick, dude. Sick." And, according to Ink'd Up Tat2's Facebook page, Combs is "getting better every day" — an especially exciting prospect, since he's already no stranger to the great honor that is EW's best tattoo artist distinction.

2. [three-way tie] Eileen King/Heather Wallace/Vanessa Martin unityschoolofdance.com; eugeneballet.org; eugenedancefactory.com.
3. Lindsey Shields flexstudios.org.

You like the way he moves. Last year his company Work Dance nabbed first place for best show, and this year the man himself gets the gold. Boozer studied dance at LCC, but he first caught the jitterbug at 12 while watching Michael Jackson on an MTV awards show. "My inspiration was definitely Michael Jackson," Boozer says. "For kids of my era, it was all about him. He's created dance moves that no one could." Now Boozer creates choreography for Work Dance that no one else in town is doing, pulling inspiration from the King of Pop and Lady Gaga (who he's met, twice). Next up is Mechanical Dancer in February at the Hult. "It's about keeping the dance alive," he says, "creating your own art and being confident."

3. Very Little Theatre 2350 Hilyard St. 344-7751. thevlt.com.

Since moving to its new, improved location on Broadway, Oregon Contemporary Theatre has become one of the anchoring institutions in a revitalized downtown scene, providing a line-up of consistently strong, often homegrown stageworks that find a heady balance between artistic risk and entertaining accessibility. Artistic director Craig Willis is a staunch advocate of plays created here in the Northwest, and he works to keep the productions affordable for local audiences. "OCT's mission is to produce bold entertainment that challenges expectations, inspires curiosity, encourages dialogue and supports positive change," Willis tells EW, adding that the best way to keep theater vital in Eugene is by "bringing the best artists together to collaborate on something they feel passionate about." Bravo, OCT.

The quickest way to both gain and lose someone's heart is available two nights a week at Black Forest's karaoke nights. A two-time winner, Black Forest provides the necessary cocktails and instrumental version of hit songs, allowing Eugeneans to unleash their inner Monday blues — often and unapologetically in the form of Radiohead or Springsteen. To help loosen those vocals cords and inhibitions, Black Forest offers $2.50 wells on Mondays and a "liquor for the price of a well" deal on Wednesdays. Start dreaming of stage dives.

more than their impressively diverse musicianship, though, Sol Seed has an admirable spirit. A Sol Seed show is a feel-good experience to end all feel-good experiences, with a perfect balance of jam band grooving and sing-along opportunities. BEST TEENAGE ANTI-WASTELAND

eugene-or.gov/wjskatepark

Every once in a while, city government does its job and does it remarkably well. Such is the case with the recently opened WJ Skatepark — the largest such skatepark, covered and lighted, in the nation. Dreamed up by a group of skaters who petitioned the city for a new park, and a decade in the making, this $2.5-million carnival of concrete is a shredder's wet dream, offering features like a drop pool, iconic ribbon and mini snake run, along with oodles of rolling plains and steep terrain that accommodate everyone from beginners to pros. At 23,000 square feet and open to the public from 6 am to 1 am, this is the sort of public works project that restores one's faith in bureaucracy and the power of the people to petition the government for a redress of teenage grievances. Way to be, Eugene.

BEST FRIEND OF EXTRACURRICULARS IN 4J SCHOOLS

eefflane.org; betheeducationfoundation.org

The Eugene Education Foundation (EEF) helps 4J schools and students achieve what might otherwise be impossible. It accomplishes this by providing grant money for projects that are not attainable through regular sources of funding, such as state and bond money. In the 2013-2014 school year, EEF funded projects that found transportation for homeless students, assisted the School Garden Project at Adams Elementary School and put thousands of dollars toward bolstering music education throughout the district. The Bethel Education Foundation serves a similar purpose, and last year, it contributed $19,919 worth of grants to projects in the Bethel School District.

Known for its wall of whiskeys and a laid-back atmosphere, Izakaya Meiji on Van Buren in the Whiteaker is one-of-a-kind in Eugene. The location is a perfect spot for a few after-work drinks, the most popular of which include the bourbon and ginger and the Meiji Mule (vodka, lime juice and black peppered ginger syrup and Shōchū). Dinner usually has a more "all-ages" crowd, but after 10 pm it starts to feel like a bar. And if you come Sunday, $12 will get you a burger, brew and a shot of bourbon. "This is the best Manhattan that I've had in my life," says general manager Chad Kushuba. Don't miss out on Meiji's old fashioned, which is made two different ways: one, contemporary, with muddled wedges of lemon and orange, and the other has no fruit and just zest. New items include variations on a hot toddy, hot ciders and rye-and-ciders.

With all the breweries in town, it's easy to get your fill of local craft beer. The stuff is everywhere: for sale in the grocery store, at local restaurants or on tap in bars. Ninkasi, however, consistently out-brews the other breweries, and maybe it's because of all its creative efforts to engage the community. "We believe in flavorful, balanced beers, and building relationships wherever we distribute Ninkasi," says CEO and co-founder Nikos Ridge. Whether it is brewing up a new beer to commemorate LCC's 50th anniversary, putting on a Halloween party or having great outdoor seating at its tasting room, Ninkasi always seems to be trying something new.

EW raised some hackles when we included the Best DUI Lawyer category this year. Calm down people, we weren't promoting drunk driving. We were pointing out that drinking categories are among our most popular and if you are going to drink, you need to be safe and legal. Enter Mike Arnold of Arnold Law, who says his DUI practice is about due process, government accountability and examining evidence. "Ninety percent of my job is sticking up for the little guy against the big guy, the citizen against his government," Arnold says. He is vehemently in favor of using blood rather than a breathalyzer to more scientifically determine a driver's sobriety. "The only competent way to determine blood alcohol level is drawing the blood and then testing it," he says, pointing out that even a urine test only shows a history of use, not whether it is still in the system. Defending alleged drunk drivers in court, however, is not a defense of drunk driving. "Driving is a serious business," Arnold says. ".01 or .08, if you are negatively affected, get off the road."

Best Hangover Breakfast is a tough category because, well, nothing seems good when you have a hangover. Brails, however, has come out on top again, serving a variety of breakfast classics that are delicious, even for those who may have refrained from moderation the night before. With large plates of crisp hash browns, fluffy pancakes and cups of coffee that never hit bottom, Brails makes a satisfying breakfast. The menu covers all the breakfast basics, along with a few special dishes like the aptly named Hangover Special. On Sunday mornings, when people line up in the parking lot waiting for a table, the staff is well-organized and courteous, making sure customers get their food and get on with their day. Even headache victims can agree that Brails does it just right.

Sweet Life can trace its sugary legacy back to a pair of sisters and a trip to Europe. "We took something very Old World and combined it with a very Eugene flavor," says Catherine Reinhart, co-owner, along with her sister, Cheryl, of Sweet Life. The result is the Sweet Life we know today: handmade artisan-style pastries and desserts, combined with fresh ingredients and an awareness of alternative diets. With display cases full of creatively crafted desserts, it's hard to say what is most popular, though the dessert of the month, made with seasonally available ingredients, is what seems to disappear quickest. "The dessert of the month satisfies that craving for something new," Catherine Reinhart says. Sweet Life, however, is nothing new for most people in Eugene: It has been the undisputed Best of Eugene winner for sweets for more than 10 years.

3. Ken's BBQ King 1810 Willamette St. 915-3252.

The South may be a "far piece" from Oregon, but that doesn't stop Papa's Soul Food Kitchen. They have been serving Southern-style cuisine to Eugene since 2000, and people keep coming back for seconds. Papa's has all the classics: catfish, fried chicken, barbecue and more. Then there are the sides, like hushpuppies and collard greens. "We make everything from scratch," owner Deb Lee says, and that extra effort shows, for the bold and unique flavors at Papa's aren't easy to find in Eugene. And there is, in fact, a secret sauce. Lee calls the restaurant's barbecue sauce a "well-guarded family recipe" and admits there are "only two of us here who know how to make the sauce," though she let slip that it's a Kansas City-style sauce. The real secret at Papa's, however, is already out: It makes some damn good food.

BEST MEXICAN

1. Chapala Mexican Restaurant 136 Oakway Center, 434-6113; 68 W. 29th Ave., 683-5458. chapalamex.com.
2. Tacovore 530 Blair Blvd. 735-3518. tacovorepnw.com.
3. Belly Taqueria 454 Willamette St. 687-8226. eatbelly.com.

Three cheers for Chapala! A wellspring of amazing Mexican food for 20 years, Chapala is always trying something new. "We're adding a bit more spice to some recipes now," says Erin Pelayo, owner of Chapala. "We also recently came out with some low-calorie dishes that are going gangbuster, like our chicken lime cilantro salad." Pelayo says it's important to her that Chapala gives back to the community, so the restaurant donates to local school districts as well as supporting projects at the Maude Kerns Art Center. Looking forward, Pelayo says Chapala plans to offer delivery starting next year, and she's working to expand the restaurant's catering business. "As a restaurant, you have to keep changing," she says. "That's why we continue to grow and reach out to our customers."

2. Chingu 1466 W. 7th Ave. 687-6424.
3. Cafe Seoul 1930 Franklin Blvd. 687-2122.

Traditional Korean cuisine emphasizes harmony, a principle readily apparent at Noodle Bowl. Sweet and spicy, meat and vegetables, traditional and modern, all come together in a unique blend at this downtown restaurant. Owner Sue Lee and her son Jae Lee work together to serve these delicious and harmonious Korean meals. "I have really strong pride in traditional Korean cuisine," Jae Lee says. That pride is evident in the house-made kimchi, mild in flavor with a slightly spicy kick, or the bulgogi, served while the marinated beef is still sizzling. Bibimbap is their most popular dish, and each side dish has a unique but complementary taste. "People here really like the food," Jae Lee says. "When I see that, it really makes me happy."

BEST FREE ART EXPERIENCE

The Eugene-Springfield area is one of the best hubs in the PNW to see public art, specifically murals. We're no Berlin or NYC, but look around! The per capita density for art is high — chances are you're within a block or two of a great mural as you read this. Who hasn't gotten lost in thought staring at Jim Evangelista's black-and-white solitary street scene at 12th and High? Or catalogued activist artist Kari Johnson's numerous bright narrative tableaus around town? Or stared into Buster Keaton's eyes at Cottage Grove's mural of The General? If we weren't already, the unveiling of The Simpsons mural in Springfield officially put us on the map as a destination for street art. Kudos to Lane Arts Council for taking note and hosting mural bike tours in 2013, 2014 and, hopefully, 2015. If our walls could talk, they'd say "More art, please!"

BEST REHABBED RAPTOR WONDERLAND

With golden eyes and stunning white feathers, Archimedes the snowy owl is something of a celebrity at the Cascades Raptor Center, where injured birds get TLC and another shot at the skies. Tucked away in South Eugene right off Fox Hollow Road, the raptor center operates with a host of volunteers, a few staff members and executive director Louise Shimmel. These hard-working bird lovers give visitors a chance to see stunning birds of prey, all rehabilitated raptors that cannot be released into the wild due to injury or over-familiarization with humans. The raptor center also rehabilitates and releases all birds that are ready to take to the wild. It's amazing to have a resource like this here in Eugene, one that both helps birds survive and helps people understand just how important and beautiful these raptors are.

BEST NEW RESTAURANT

1. Elk Horn Brewery 686 E. Broadway St. 505-8356.
2. Tacovore 530 Blair Blvd. 735-3518. tacovorepnw.com.
3. Grit 1080 W. 3rd Ave. 343-0501. gritkitchen.com.

You may recognize Elk Horn Brewery as that place on Franklin Boulevard where Carl's Jr. used to be. But once you've been inside, you'll begin to form new memories: ciders, brews and delicious Southern food with a Northwest twist. Elk Horn is a continuation of owners Stephen and Colleen Sheehan's former Delacata food truck, which opened in 2010 with a similar menu. The food truck didn't use elk, but the most popular item at the new location is the elk burger, made with fresh, local ground-elk steak. Other signature items include a smoked tri-trip burrito and a polenta cake with duck bacon and Cajun hollandaise. Elk Horn offers live music every weekend, and the building is made from entirely recycled building material. "It's been an overwhelming response," says Stephen Sheehan, who increased his staff from 24 to 62 within two weeks of operation. "To be putting that many people to work in the community — we feel really blessed."

Will someone please give Brendan Mahaney a key to the city, already? As founder and executive chef of Belly, Mahaney has become a Eugene institution, serving up a creative but consistent, amazing but affordable blend of American and European rustic farmhouse cuisine with a distinctly Southern soul twist. Belly's offerings — from the pork confit to the bacon-wrapped, manchego-stuffed dates to the oxtail and shitake empanadas — walk that delectable line between gastronomic adventure and foodie comfort. And despite the restaurant's success, Mahaney is not one to rest on his laurels; he relocated a couple years back to bigger digs downtown, turned the original 5th Street location into a taqueria, then had to move Taco Belly to a bigger space. That closed and he moved Belly Taqueria to Willamette Street, with Belly taking up residence on Broadway. "It's a great big canvas," Mahaney says of the restaurant's menu. "Every week there's something that's added or tweaked. There's a nice organic feel to that. It's evolved."

BEST FOOD CART

1. Sammitch sammitchtime.com.
2. Delacata delacata.blogspot.com.
3. Da Nang Vietnamese Eatery danangeatery.com.

All hail the Sammitch. With splashy rainbow colors and a whimsical attitude, the Sammitch trucks are instantly recognizable all across town, not just for the great grub but also for a quirky delivery style that's just about perfect for Eugene. "Off the wall isn't exactly right because there's already an Off the Waffle," Sammitch owner KC Brooks jokes as he tries to describe the appeal of his food cart. "One of my favorite quotes from a business I admire, Dogfish Ales, is that it's 'off-centered ales for off-centered people.' I have a really strange way of delivering food, and it's capturing the imagination of a lot of people." Brooks says that the design on his first food truck was drawn by one of his friends, Harlequin, when she was 16. He bought her design when she was 21, but he says he loves the youthful feel of the artwork. "It's so awesome and pure, no subliminal messages, just drawn because she thought it was pretty," he says. Brooks is implementing a "Sammitch of the Month" program, so be on the lookout for the Thanksgiving-friendly "Turkey Gobbler," with ground turkey, dried cranberries and Stove Top stuffing.

3. Morning Glory Café 450 Willamette St. 687-0709. morninggloryeugene.com.

When it comes to Cornbread Café, we're not even talking about the best vegan food in Eugene. Nope, this joint has got to be one of the best places (and one of the most unique!) to get Southern-inspired comfort food in the entire country, using 90 percent organic ingredients. Just ask Guy Fieri and the Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives team: Cornbread Café will be the first ever vegan restaurant featured on the famous Food Network show. The episode features a Cornbread signature: the Eugenewich, a vegan variation of Carl's Jr.'s Western Bacon Cheeseburger. Ingredients include a southern-fried Surata tofu patty topped with melted Daiya cheddar, deep-fried carrot slices and hand-breaded onion rings. "I made it my goal to be on that show," says owner Sheree Walters. "It was a very surreal experience." Situated in an old diner on 7th and Polk that was built in the 1940s, Walters says that Cornbread Café has been a natural fit for Eugene since first opening its doors.

BEST INDIE BOOKSTORE

1. Smith Family Bookstore 525 Willamette St., 343-4717; 768 E. 13th Ave., 345-1651. smithfamilybookstore.com.
2. Tsunami Books 2585 Willamette St. 345-8986.
3. J. Michaels Books 160 E. Broadway. 342-2002.

Smith Family Book Store has become an undeniable staple of the Eugene book-loving community. The business, which is family-owned and operated, has been selling and buying books for roughly 30 years. The comfortable clutter of the store is immediately compensated for by a large, engaging collection of books, ranging from textbooks to more than 500 sections and subsections. And don't worry: It's all labeled and organized alphabetically. Smith offers reasonable prices, and philosophically, the store epitomizes the open-minded Eugene community.

BEST OF THE BEST:

BEST THING THAT COULD HAPPEN TO EUGENE

- Everyone gets superpowers and becomes invincible (not immortal so we still die of old age because who wants to live forEVER?) and then dinosaurs come back to life and we each get one to ride off into the sunset
- Everyone stops caring about Duck football
- Horrid new apartments between 11th and 13th on Willamette collapse, harming no one
- Jay Bozo gets thrown out of town
- Christ-centered revival
- It would become the capital of Cascadia

BEST THING ABOUT EUGENE WEEKLY

- Good for my guinea pig's cage
- Humor that nobody gets
- It is not The Register-Guard
- It's Eugene's best attempt at a cultural publication
- Printed faces are good for portrait drawing practice
- Provides the best representation of just how truly raw and weird this place is
- Willingness to print all kinds of crazy reader letters

WORST THING ABOUT EUGENE WEEKLY

- Too much barbecue focus. I don't care about Hot Mama's Wings
- Ink rubs off on your hands
- News. You guys are like Fox News except on the other side of the spectrum
- Not enough porn
- Features that seem to repeat year after year... how many times do we really need to read about the SLUG competition?
- Only represents a very small, somewhat incestuous segment of the Eugene population
- Gives me too many choices on what to do on weekends
- One of your contributors used to live at my address and I get bill collectors looking for him all the time

3. Capella Market 2489 Willamette St. 345-1014. capellamarket.com.

One thing's for sure: Market of Choice has choices. A bakery, beer and wine selection, restaurant-style salad bar and a large selection of organic and conventional produce — all this and more can be found at any one of the four Eugene locations. One of the most popular features of the store is the public seating area, which always seems to be filled. In recent years the store has expanded into other parts of the state, but local products are still for sale on the shelves. The store also has a green reputation. In 2008, Market of Choice eliminated the use of plastic grocery bags at its stores, and it separates compostable waste from the rest of its trash in order to more efficiently dispose of garbage. And the store on Willamette has solar panels on its roof, selling the extra energy back to EWEB.

Nicholson and his crew are dedicated to advocating for alternative transportation year-round. As a feisty city councilor, Nicholson was one of the strongest advocates for cycling the city has ever had. He still keeps up with local politics and advocates with passion. Eugene's college students praise the city for finally getting an H&M — but local fashion junkies know all about this clothing haven. The shop features clothing from homegrown Redoux designers, alterations, sewing classes and resale clothing, as well as local art and local designers' clothing, accessories and jewelry. "Part of our vision for it is to be a community hub for people to enjoy a unique shopping experience and be challenged and inspired by issues of social consciousness," says Bria Izreal, one of the parlor's owners. In true Eugene fashion, the best clothing store requires both style and sustainability.

Cronin previously co-founded the nonprofit Grassroots Eugene with Casey Houlihan, and Cronin says once the start up capital is paid back for Twenty After Four, he and Houlihan plan to donate their profits to grassroots organizing. Cronin points out that Twenty After Four is also conveniently located near the Community Alliance of Lane County, just the type of social justice work he seeks to support.

BEST LANE COUNTY VACATION SPOT

1. Florence/the coast
2. McKenzie River
3. Waldo Lake

One big reason Eugene is such a great place to live is its proximity to the Oregon Coast. Just an hour away is Florence with its marvelous, not-too-touristy Old Town on the river, great for wandering around and sight-smelling. Kids love climbing the sand dunes south of town and swimming and fishing in Cleawox Lake. Need grit for your garden or sand box? Just shake out your underwear after a trip to the dunes. North of Florence is a dramatic coastline that draws photographers and nature lovers from around the world, regardless of the season. Why live anywhere else?

BEST ANNUAL EVENT

1. Oregon Country Fair oregoncountryfair.org.
2. Whiteaker Block Party whiteakerblockparty.com.
3. Eugene Celebration (even though it was canceled) eugenecelebration.com.

There's really no contest here: For three days every July, a big chunk of land in rural Veneta is transformed — seemingly by magic, but in reality through the hard work of hundreds of volunteers — into a hermetic, self-sustaining world that is less latter-day hippie village than alternate gonzo reality where time slows and freakdom flows. Though crusty old-timers are fond of griping that the Fair over the years has gone straight (i.e. too commercial, not druggy enough), OCF, heading now into its 46th year, remains a kaleidoscopic trip through the looking glass, where artisans, puppeteers, musicians, stilt-walkers, peripatetic poets, perpetual paraders, foodies, nudies and all manner of endeavoring free spirits are unleashed on the tens of thousands of fairgoers who wander those long forested trails in search of cultural catharsis.

2. Hunky Dory 271 W. 7th Ave. 345-1853.
3. Cornerstone Glass 1068 W. 2nd Ave., 341-1788; 446 E. 13th Ave., 844-1585. cornerstoneglass.com.

Midtown Direct Smoke Shop nabs first place again, making that two years in a row. In a town brimming with glassblowers and smoke shops, why Midtown? "It's customer service," owner Rich Johnson says. "There's some contagious positive energy that seems to vortex here. There are literally 10 couples that have spawned out of Midtown." They also like to keep it local. "We sell about 85 percent local glass," employee Matt DeBellis adds. "Almost everything in the cases is made here in Eugene. We don't carry any Chinese glass." Midtown has come along way since its tough beginnings in 2003. "I opened the doors here a couple days after the federal bust, Johnson says. "I swung the doors back open, the community came back in and was like, 'This is bullshit.'"

WHAT'S HAPPENING

A former Portlander who came up through the Olympia music scene, Mirah is an indie-pop queen whose reign has outlasted most twee birds of the like. The now Brooklyn-based singer-songwriter returns to Eugene Nov. 11 with her fifth full-length album — 2014's Changing Light — which she has said is less cutesy than her signature sweet folksiness. Pitchfork describes it best: "Her downy voice is equally appealing whether set in growly rock music or glitteringly ornate folk, the poles that her new album Changing Light often switches between." Mirah is joined by the the dynamic and bubbly Led to Sea, a solo project by Seattle violist-violinist L. Alex Guy.

Mirah and Led to Sea play 8pm Tuesday, Nov. 11, at Cozmic; $10 adv., $12 door.

Hailing from Oakland and copping all the bluesy, ballsy urban grit of that Cali concrete jungle, The Coup's sound is a furious amalgamation of fun and fuck-you that runs elements of Motown, '70s funk and '80s punk through the grinder of politicized rap and hip hop, creating a kind of conscious party music that is at once dirty and danceable, like a filthier version of Outkast. Frontman Boots Riley can spill rhyme and chop syllables with the best of 'em, and he's got charisma to spare, evident in a gem like "My Favorite Mutiny," where over a relentless thump he challenges you to "Move, if you got the nerve..."

ARTIST SPOTLIGHT: MEESHA GOLDBERG

Confessions of a macabre pop-surrealist

Suspended deep in a block of ice, her long braids coiled around a pair of hand axes, Meesha Goldberg is determined to break free. This is not a magic trick. It's a self-portrait.

You wouldn't guess from her work that Goldberg has been painting for only about two years, but discipline and nocturnal solitude have aided her well, along with a background in figure drawing and poetry that translates vividly to the canvas.

The Queens, New York, native who now lives in Eugene, does glasswork by day but primarily aspires to realize her artistic vision through paint. It was, after all, Georgia O'Keefe's desert scenes that drew her across the country in the first place. Goldberg has since come to have a weathered, psychedelic interpretation of who we are as people.

"A lot of it is really a critique of society," Goldberg says. Her work employs a mixed iconography of popular Americana often clashing with death and the occult. The daughter of a Russo-Korean couple that orphaned her at a young age, Goldberg says that the "sensitivity of examining death, and living with it, is accessible in my work. It's an important perspective to abide with."

Conversely, her most recent painting, "Keeper," is decidedly spry. This nude of a beekeeper depicts deep harmony between woman, hive and Earth. "It's functional in a way that's one step beyond aesthetic," she says. "It's about putting out prayers and intentions and focus."

Goldberg also paints Slavic-influenced wooden altars that present what she calls "contemporary Gods." The pieces express human ignorance and self-destruction, touching on themes of technology, war and space travel.

Much of Goldberg's work heads out of state, due to an exuberant social media presence. A painting of two skeletons hugging was commissioned by a client in Texas, though prints were still sold in Eugene. Last year Goldberg's work was on display at the Maude Kerns Art Center's Día de los Muertos show, and she previously submitted work for the Mayor's Art Show, though it was relegated to Salon des Refusés.

Such a slight meant little, given that within a year her work would hang side-by-side with that of David Lynch, at the Twin Peaks: Fire Walk with Me 20th Anniversary group art exhibit in Santa Monica, California. With Rick Zar, her partner both in art and love, Goldberg produced a replica of the neon sign from One-Eyed Jack's, the seedy Canadian brothel of Lynch's imagination.

Goldberg and Zar met while she was living and working in New Mexico, and the two moved to Eugene in 2007. For Goldberg, it was about finding peace. "The mellow lifestyle of Eugene is a lot more conducive to not being distracted," says Goldberg, who thrives creatively in the local environs.

"I'm constantly inspired by the fields, forests and skies," Goldberg says. She's planning a series of traditional landscape paintings. And she will show locally soon: Goldberg's painting "Backwards Into Night" will be in The New Zone Gallery show, The Cabinet of Steampunk Curiosities, with an opening reception 5:30 pm Friday, Nov. 7, during First Friday ArtWalk. For the next year, she will also peck away at designing a tarot deck and, in keeping with her penchant for the ghastly, she says she'll immolate her model from "Keeper," albeit with brushstrokes. ■

Goldberg's work is currently on view at Portland's Salmon Street Studio. To see her work online, look for her Meesha Goldberg Facebook page.

ARTSHOUND

Sniffing out what you shouldn't miss in the arts this week

'KING' BY ARTCHIC DENA AMEND

Très chic: It's time for the 10th Annual ArtChics Benefit sale 4 to 9 pm Friday, Nov. 7, and 11 am to 4 pm Saturday, Nov. 8, at 76 W. Broadway (the old Saturday Market office); a portion of proceeds will go to the Pearl Buck Center, a nonprofit that provides recreational and education programs to those affected by disabilities. The ArtChics — a local artist group — will have a wide variety of member's art goodies, from Mija Andrade's hand-painted records to fiber artist Tylar Merrill's felted designs (seen recently walking down the runway in Eugene and Portland Fashion Week) to Kasey White's heirloom legume designs. "She takes the beans, which are gorgeous, and makes them into jewelry," Andrade says. The ArtChics help each other with individual works but do larger projects, such as painting a mural in the Pearl Buck Center preschool and updating past projects. "The most recent thing we did was cleaning up the Whiteaker mosaic sculpture," Andrade says of the 2001 MECCA piece "Of the People, For the People, By the People" at 2nd and Blair.

The rains have come, but November's First Friday ArtWalk is going strong, and eclectic. The tour, led by Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art Communications Manager (and former SLUG Queen) Debbie Williamson, starts at the Hult's Jacobs Gallery with Talent Pool, a show hosted by the Eugene International Film Festival featuring behind-the-scenes film photos, set dressings and more. Next, discover the subtle beauty of painter Gabriella Soraci's still lifes at Oregon Art Supply. Off the beaten (guided) trail, take a gander at the stark and elegant photography of Dmitri von Klein at Route 5 NW Wine Bar.

If you find yourself in Portland before Dec. 30, mosey over to the Wonder Ballroom's Bunk Bar for the Portland Shutter Rock group show featuring the electric music photography of six photographers, including that of EW's very own Todd Cooper. Cooper's portraits feature Yelowolf, YG, Shakey Graves and Justin Townes Earle.

Don't miss: Greenhill's 7th Annual Art for Animals Silent & Live Auction 7 pm Friday, Nov. 7, at the Ninkasi Administration Building, 155 Blair Blvd.; see green-hill.org for details.

LISTEN UP, ASSHOLE

Jason Schwartzman talks to EW about egotism, empathy and starring in Alex Ross Perry's Listen Up Philip

One peek at the trailer for Listen Up Philip and you'd think it was another painfully indie, pseudo-intellectual film in which nothing happens — and, for the most part, this is accurate. The movie follows the despicably self-centered mind of aberrant Jewish novelist Philip Lewis Friedman, played by Jason Schwartzman (no stranger to neurotic roles, or even neurotic Jewish novelist roles). Philip, after enjoying the tepid success garnered by his first book, finds himself caught in the space between his fantasy of himself as a gifted writer and the less glamorous reality of his life and relationships.

In short, the slightest drop of literary validation turns Philip into a real asshole, but one who believes he's only being selfish and indifferent for the sake of his art.

All the minutiae of the film, down to its title typeface

(appropriately identical to that of Portnoy's Complaint by acerbic Jewish novelist Philip Roth) reflect this suffocating, hyper-cultured headspace. In fact, Philip's egotism permeates the movie so thoroughly that it shouldn't be much of a comedy — or even an enjoyable watch at all. But the whole thing is salvaged and inexplicably humanized by one fact: Schwartzman, in all his wry candor, is impossible to hate.

"We didn't really try to make him likeable," Schwartzman tells EW, describing Philip as "a guy who's in a real miserable period of his life and is kind of just handling all of it." Leave it to Schwartzman to have this much gentle empathy for a character who, when ditching his girlfriend without warning to focus on his writing, says to her matter-of-factly, "I hope this will be good for us, but especially for me."

Schwartzman says that he and writer-director Alex Ross Perry agreed that Philip's laughably vile lines should be delivered as just that: vile to the point of discomfort and parody, and not at all tainted by morality.

"It was funny," Schwartzman says, "because sometimes, in our earlier discussions about it, we talked about sympathy." But, he says, "it just made him seem passive-aggressive. It undermined the whole thing."

There is an excess of themes that "the whole thing" in Listen Up Philip could refer to, most of them unabashedly Philip Rothian: self-examination versus interpersonal enjoyment, money and success versus personal self-worth. Each of these is explored with all the dazzling grace and humor of classic '70s Woody Allen, and they would quickly come unglued if Schwartzman didn't bring such shaggy charm to the role.

But Schwartzman doesn't achieve this effect single-handedly; the movie, shot in 16-mm stock by a small crew, has an inherent intimacy to it, even when acidic.

Schwartzman describes the shooting process as "all of us dancing a little bit together in these smaller spaces." This compactness made for greater authenticity; if an actor happened to leave the room, "the camera could follow him, and there wouldn't be, like, a cooler of Diet Cokes and a bunch of cables in there. Everything had the possibility of being on film at any time. Everything is in the movie."

Above all, though, Schwartzman credits Perry's quick-witted scriptwriting as being the film's most powerful force. "Rarely do you find a script that someone has taken the time to write well ... it was great, this time around, to read a script that even if it wasn't a movie, it was a great way to spend an afternoon — just reading it," Schwartzman says.

Listen Up Philip might not be a Philip Roth novel, but in film form, it's just about as close as you can get. ■

Listen Up Philip opens Friday, Nov. 7, at the Bijou Metro.

YELAWOLF PERFORMS TO A SOLD-OUT CROWD ON OCT. 6, 2011, AT WOW HALL

THE WOLF AMONG US

Sample "Till It's Gone" from Southern rapper Yelawolf's yet-to-be-released Love Story, and you might be surprised — first by the rich, oaky acoustic guitar line that kicks the track off and next by what the bluesy, looping arpeggios recall: the piano figure introducing Nina Simone's classic "Sinnerman."

The southern gospel and blues feel continues throughout the track, but "Till It's Gone" is most definitely a rap song. The cut showcases Yelawolf's signature intense flow and lingual gymnastics. He spits, barks, testifies and lays down staccato shotgun blasts. And the song's chorus has such a catchy radio-ready hook, it's hard to believe Rihanna isn't singing it.

Yelawolf came up in the online mixtape scene, nabbed the attention of Eminem and, for a time, was hyped as hip hop's next big thing, due in no small part to his intense live shows. But Yelawolf's follow-up to his 2011 debut Radioactive has taken a bit too long, and some say his star has cooled. Not so fast — judging from "Till It's Gone," there's more to be heard from Yelawolf.

Yelawolf returns with special guests Rittz, Big Henry and DJ Klever 9 pm Tuesday, Nov. 11, at WOW Hall; $18 adv., $20 door. — William Kennedy

A ROSE BY ANY OTHER NAME

Before discussing indie-rock siren Frankie Rose, one must ask: Which Frankie Rose are we talking about? The founding member of garage-rock acts Crystal Stilts, Dum Dum Girls or Vivian Girls? Or the Brooklyn-based songwriter rumored to be related to legendary hard rocker and mouthpiece for Guns 'n' Roses, Axl Rose?

The answer is both. "Why, yes. In fact [Axl] is my great grandfather," Frankie Rose tells EW. "I only met him once backstage when his band was headlining a Metallica-Motorhead concert."

This could be the truth, or it could be a heavy dose of Bob Dylan/Jack White-style self-mythologizing B.S. Either way, Rose is one of indie rock's most intriguing new voices, and she's coming to Eugene in support of yet another Frankie Rose side project — the 2014 release of Careers by Beverly, her recording project with Drew Citron. Does Frankie like the ever-evolving list of lineups?

"No, I would love to have a consistent lineup," Rose says. "However, it is hard to get musicians to stick around. Most of them have their own projects, so devoting themselves to someone else's project can be almost impossible."

But what stays consistent throughout all of Rose's work is a focus on the loud-soft dynamic of dreamy, shoe-gazer pop music.

"I'm told it is dreamy pop music," she says. "So I will have to take everyone's word for it. For me, it's just a collection of sounds that I think work nicely together."

United Nations is a punk-rock super group of Ronald Reagan-mask-wearing banditos. Not just any band could get away with standing up to both The Beatles and the actual United Nations. But see exhibit A: the cover of the band's 2008 debut featuring The Beatles' famous Abbey Road image (this time with The Fab Four engulfed in flames and crossing right to left). And exhibit B: The real U.N. sent the band a cease-and-desist letter for unauthorized use of the name and U.N. logo on Facebook.

So how did the band fight the law and end up winning? For starters, nothing the band does is copyrighted. United Nations encourages downloading, copying and sharing its work and, except for vocalist Geoff Rickly (formerly of punk-emo darlings Thursday), all members are contractually obligated to remain anonymous. In the eyes of the law, United Nations, the band, barely exists.

"I don't feel like many bands take chances anymore," Rickly told Alternative Press in 2013. "There's a lot of talk about being punk and revolutionary and this and that, but it's also awfully safe — punk seems awfully safe to me now, so I like the idea of doing something that's actually dangerous."

Musically, United Nations will sandblast your face holes with songs like “False Flags” from 2014’s Four More Years. A key underpinning of the ’90s-era emo-screamo is — underneath all the noise — a lot of melody, particularly in the guitars. And the relatively gentle song “Meanwhile On Main Street” exposes Rickly’s roots in Thursday. But overall, United Nations is a pulsating, painful, exhilarating and experimental blast-core collective making interesting political agit-punk statements for our time.

United Nations play with Silver Snakes, Novellas, Cursed Graves and Recluse 8 pm Tuesday, Nov. 11, at The Boreal, 450 W. 3rd Ave; $10 adv., $12 door. — William Kennedy

MUSIC BY BRETT CAMPBELL

TRIO CON BRIO COPENHAGEN

FRESH BEATS

PROJECT Trio, Duo Chrysocola, the UO Symphony and company keep it contemporary

People who worry about classical music's future point to its aging, dwindling audiences; stale, predictable repertoire (the same old pieces by the same old long-dead European composers); stuffy atmosphere (tuxedos! No unauthorized clapping!); dull, rote performances. Then come glimmers of hope like PROJECT Trio, which performs at The Shedd this Thursday, Nov. 6. Although the ensemble has played with major orchestras, the Brooklyn-based flute-cello-double-bass trio dresses informally, plays jazz and original music as well as classics (including an arrangement of Prokofiev's Peter and the Wolf set in Brooklyn). And member Greg Pattillo may be the only beat-box flutist in classical music. Their high-energy shows bubble with 21st-century music, quick humor, tight playing and fun — all qualities that classical music desperately needs more of if it wants to attract younger, broader audiences.

Another youngish trio that plays contemporary and classic sounds, Trio con Brio Copenhagen, performs Nov. 16 at the UO's Beall Concert Hall, playing Romantic classics by Tchaikovsky and Brahms and contemporary Danish composer Per Nørgård's glitteringly gripping Spell, which marries minimalism's shifting pattern to a surprisingly, well, spellbinding harmonic richness. And the UO's own Duo Chrysocola (saxophonist Idit Shner and harpist Linda-Rose Hembreiker), which plays Beall Nov. 14, actually commissions new music for its unusual instrumental combo, as well as playing older works by French classical composer Jacques Ibert and American jazz master Yusef Lateef.

Speaking of endlessly repeated warhorses: Thursday, Nov. 13, the Eugene Symphony performs two of the greatest symphonies — Mozart's magnificent 41st and final symphony and Schubert's poignant so-called "Unfinished" symphony. The closest thing to a contemporary work, Samuel Barber's powerful Violin Concerto is 75 years old, not exactly the kind of program that will attract the 20- and 30-somethings that classical music needs, but it's one of the finest American classical music masterpieces, with a performance starring soloist Searmi Park. As historical museum concerts go, this is a good one. That same night, the UO Symphony plays the same Schubert symphony, Brahms's first piano concerto and the excellent contemporary American composer Michael Daugherty's Flamingo. For something more unusual, on Nov. 16, Beall hosts the Eugene Symphonic Band's fall concert, which features a bunch of contemporary composers you've probably never heard of and an arrangement of a Wagner piece.

Also at Beall Sunday, Nov. 9, Oregon Bach Festival artistic director Matthew Halls returns to conduct the UO Chamber Choir in a Veterans Day-themed concert of music from his United Kingdom homeland: the great Baroque composer Henry Purcell's Funeral Sentences and contemporary Scottish composer James MacMillan's A Child's Prayer, honoring the child victims of the horrific 1996 Scottish school shooting, plus Bruckner's E minor Mass, featuring the University Singers and Oregon Wind Ensemble.

That's one of a pair of strongly recommended choral concerts this weekend, the other being the Nov. 7 Eugene Vocal Arts Ensemble and Oregon Mozart Players' Beall Hall performance of one of the greatest and most familiar Baroque vocal masterpieces, Vivaldi's Gloria, and another Italian Baroque beauty by the died-too-young Giovanni Pergolesi — not the famous Stabat Mater but Magnificat — plus earlier Italian classics by Palestrina, Scarlatti, Lotti and more.

If your tastes run more toward the folk tradition, the young American band Bua, which plays Irish traditional music on fiddle, pipes, flute, guitar and more, has a house concert at 755 River Road Friday night, Nov. 14 (contact mmeyer@efn.org for more information). And on Nov. 15, The Shedd brings the latest in its long line of Hawaiian slack key guitar masters, Makana, a protege of the renowned Sonny Chillingworth, who infuses the traditional dreamy, zingy sound with bluegrass, rock, blues and even raga influences to produce "slack-rock," which, like PROJECT Trio, goes to show that updating old music can help it remain a living tradition. ■

PETER PAN (JR.) FLIES AGAIN

Rose Children's Theatre takes us back to Never Never Land, Disney style

Who can resist a story that starts with a trio of children flying out the bedroom window to a land where you never grow up? Add a fearsome, hook-handed sea captain and a mischievous fairy, and you are solidly in the grasp of the marvelous adventure of Peter Pan, a version of which — Disney's Peter Pan Jr. — opens Friday, Nov. 7, at Churchill High School under the auspices of Rose Children's Theatre.

"Peter Pan's endearing message of eternal youth and believing in yourself is always a good one for the heart," says the play's director, Tama Rowan. The longtime Eugene musician and director should know a thing or two about eternal youth, as she's been directing children's theater for 13 years.

When asked about the benefits of working with kids, Rowan responds enthusiastically. "All benefits in my book," she says. "I adore working with children and youth; it keeps me young. They are such an inspiration." She does confess, however, that effectively and fairly blocking 63 adolescent actors on a single stage can be challenging.

The kids in the Rose Theatre production are equally enthusiastic. Wee fairy/sea creature Ellen Poulsen, 7, says that she likes "doing something I've never gotten to do before. And I love meeting new friends!" Her older sibling, Evan (crocodile/lost child), also chimes in.

ADRIANA RIPLEY PLAYS
TINKER BELL IN ROSE
CHILDREN THEATRE'S
PETER PAN JR.

"What's great is to be able to have a really fun experience," Evan says, and "to be on a stage and perform in front of other people."

According to Rowan, Rose Children's Theatre chose to go with the newer, Disney Junior version of Peter Pan because "even though condensed, this version does hold true to J. M. Barrie's story and the 1953 Disney film."

And there are a number of tweaks to the old story that Rowan admires. "I love how Disney composers Eric Svejcar and David Zellnik chose to feature Tinker Bell and her fairy court to open this musical. I also appreciate how they showed sensitivity to the Native American portion of the story and changed lyrics in the featured song to focus on bravery, friendship [and] honor."

This production, Rowan points out, is dedicated to the memory of a beloved Eugene actor. "Ten years ago, Rose Children's Theatre presented the full version of Peter Pan at the McDonald Theatre," she says. "The villainous Captain Hook was played by one of Eugene's best, John Muellner. Sadly, we lost John at the beginning of this year. His family is loaning us the beautiful hook and saber he used in the 2004 production." ■

Peter Pan Jr. runs Nov. 7-16 at Churchill High School Theater, 1850 Bailey Hill Rd.; $8-$10, therct.com.

If the chill in the air has you pining for warmer climes, then check out dancer-choreographer Bonnie Simoa and photographer-videographer John Watson's mixed-media presentation Balinese Dance: Beyond Touristic Culture, based on their recent visit to Bali with the Lane Community College Dancers. Presenters will share the fruits of their recent Bali study abroad program, where they studied with master dancers and performed to live gamelan (a form of traditional ensemble music) at the prestigious Bali Arts Festival, at the LCC Longhouse, 4:30 pm Thursday, Nov. 6; free.

Also departing to warmer locales, this month's Aloha Friday will feature a night of hula with Eugene's own hula school, Halau Hula O Na Pua O Hawai'i Nei. The event will show current works and an open mic contest "in which dancers will present tongue-in-cheek hula interpretations of modern situations." Check it out 5:30 to 7:30 pm, Nov. 21, at Cozmic.

And mark your calendars for the next Dance in Dialogue showing, a salon-style performance where artists share a few minutes of new work and then open themselves up for a friendly chat with the audience. In November, the same artists who performed at the September DiD will head to UO's Dougherty Dance Theater for another round. The creative sparks behind DiD — Shannon Mockli, Carolina Caballero and Margo Van Ummersen — are calling the leap to a more serious venue a "two-step progression" for new work. Come see how the 100-plus people in attendance at the last DiD may have influenced the art when Robin Stiehm, Shannon Mockli, Sarah Nemecek, Sara Zolbrod, Taylor Theis and Jana Meszaros strut their stuff at 8 pm, Nov. 21 and 22, at the Dougherty Dance Theater on the UO campus; $5 student, $10 general.

Robin Stiehm, artistic director of Ashland-based Dancing People Company, will hold auditions while in Eugene for positions to begin January 2015. Auditions are 1 to 4 pm, Nov. 22, at the UO's Gerlinger Annex on the UO campus; find more information at dancingpeople.com.

And just in time for the impending holiday mayhem, Neil Goldberg's aerial extravaganza Cirque Dreams: Holidayze brings its whimsical explosion of zany costumes, tumbling, dance and daring high-flying artistry to the Hult Center 7:30 pm, Nov. 22; $30-$73 tickets available at hultcenter.org.

Eugene killed it on Oct. 31 for the inaugural All Hallow's Eugene event downtown hosted by the Eugene Film Society and city of Eugene Cultural Services. Kids, adults and monsters alike came out in hordes for the costume parade kicked off by the "Masquerade of Munchkins," which started at the Eugene Public Library and ended in Kesey Square. The sounds of Mood Area 52 and the moves of Thrill the World flash mob filled the square and the lighting of jack-o'-lanterns put the crowd into a spooky spirit. And, perhaps most importantly, trick-o-treaters were still able to meet their candy quota by popping in local businesses marked with orange and black balloons. Spooktacular Eugene!

THANKSGIVING WINES

Begin your feast with the bubbles

Slumped against the grimy wall, I rode the wheezing elevator, creaking and clanking, to the 15th floor of the old high-rise in downtown Eugene, then ambled down the hall, dodging peeling linoleum, stopped at our office door, Wine Investigations, flaking black letters on frosted glass. The door was ajar, Mole obviously already at work. I pushed in, tossed my ragged fedora on a hook, surveyed our “lab.” I couldn’t suppress the dread that rose in my chest.

Every year, we go through this, trying to decide on the “best” wines for Thanksgiving feasting. Partly, at least, we struggle with the “traditional” menu — roast turkey, savory dressing and gravy, sweet spuds, beans, squash and the rest. Our problem, see, is that most wines just can’t match up well with the herbs and spices and volatile aromas/flavors on the traditional table — at least no single wine. David Lynch, wine-scribe for Bon Appétit, got it right: “There is no such thing as a perfect Thanksgiving wine.” True dat.

But Mole knows, too. His wife, the charming Molly, loves to feed people; her holiday tables are legends, and Mole covers the wines (note the plural): “A propa feast,” says he, “gots ta staht wit bubbles, den offa ever’body da kindsa wines dat’ll hang wit da chow.”

Eloquently put. Word: Lately, wine geeks talk about cava when they talk bubbles. Cava is Spanish bubbly, a blend of weird Spanish white grapes, vinified in the Champagne method but guvmint-subsidized so that the price is shockingly low. Mole had already selected Torre Oria Cava Brut Reserva ($9.95!). We tasted: crisp, clean, delightful. Pump up the party.

The phone rang. For once, I didn’t ignore it. Dan Cooley called to give me grim news: John Cooney, respected wine wholesale rep in this area for decades, is going down; Dan wanted to know if I could give John some ink before he checks out. Gotta do it: Few people outside the wine biz might know it, but John Cooney deserves a place among the Best of Eugene. Gobs of good wine found its way into this little market — probably more than warranted — only because John Cooney (Dan Cooley, too) brought the wines to our retailers, hence to us. That happened because John earned respect for his honesty and his palate — if John said the wine was good, then it was. John is perhaps best known for his “Natural World” segments on KLCC.

Nobody gets a pass on this life. Nobody lives forever. But some go too soon, and that’s sad. And some departures leave a gaping void, a loss that really can’t be filled. Leonard Cohen, in one of his most poignant lines, sings, “May everyone live, may everyone die. Hello my love, and my love goodbye.” Thanks, John, for a life of worthy work. You made living better for many folks.

‘Bottom line: Serve the wines you like.’

We’ll raise our glasses to you, filled with good wines you helped bring to our tables: Thanks again.

Mole brought me back, pouring tastes from our favorite turkey wine, gewürztraminer (just say guh-vertz). He’d selected Brandborg 2012 Oregon Gewurztraminer ($17.95), just delicious, aromatic, with zesty flavors of ripe grapefruit, slightly off-dry, the touch of sweetness just right to complement turkey — and many side dishes. Mole piped up, “Ain’t dat nice?” Yep.

Respected wine-mag Decanter assembled a panel of wine-pros to choose Thanksgiving wine. They concluded: Not pinot noir. Say what? Nonsense: Mole brought out Dollar Bills Only 2013 Pinot Noir ($14.95): “Randy at Sundance steered us ta dis, made by Patricia Green, gots some cranberry accents, jes’ fine fer a feasting.” Light body, good balance, bargain price (for pinot noir). This’ll work.

Bottom line: Serve the wines you like. Be happy. Be alive — and remember to offer thanks for all the good people whose lives and work have made our own lives better. ■

WALDO LAKE WILDERNESS

One last hike before the snow piles up

There are 85 miles of trail that cross nearly every part of the Waldo Lake Wilderness, but the Black Creek Trail is one of the best. After a short walk through an older plantation, the forest quickly transitions to a very impressive forest dominated by ancient Douglas fir nearly 7 feet in diameter and 250 feet tall.

Forests like this once blanketed much of the Cascade foothills but have since been clearcut repeatedly. These trees can grow so large because of high levels of precipitation and rare occurrence of fire. The trail climbs gradually towards 150-foot Lilian Falls, which is 1.3 miles down the trail. Lilian Falls makes an excellent destination if you’re short on time.

To continue towards Waldo Lake, veer left away from the falls onto a decidedly drier slope. The trail continues uphill, steeply at times until you reach Waldo Lake. After a couple of switchbacks the forest changes dramatically to one dominated by mountain hemlock and true fir with bear grass and huckleberry making up the understory. On some of the rocky slopes that look out over the deep canyon that Black Creek has cut you will find Douglas maple, which add some lovely fall color to the hike.

If you’re interested in a nearly 8-mile hike, then head south on the Waldo Lake trail approximately half a mile to Klovhdal Bay. Throughout much of the early 1900s different corporations attempted to divert the water of Waldo Lake down the Black Creek Canyon in order to produce electricity and water for irrigation in the Willamette Valley.

Klovhdal Bay is named for Simon Klovhdal who designed a tunnel system to lower the level of Waldo Lake 25 feet. Thankfully, this and subsequent projects to exploit Waldo Lake failed.

Huckleberry along the shores of the incredibly clear Waldo Lake provides a little bit of fall color. At this point, return the way that you came. Many trails along the western side of Waldo Lake could be combined with the Black Creek Trail for extended backpacking. If you’re heading out for this hike soon be prepared for cold, rain and possible snow. Also worth hiking in the area is the Joe Goddard Interpretive Trail, which is approximately half a mile. Absolutely massive Douglas fir and Pacific yew can be found there. To reach the Joe Goddard Trail, simply turn off to the right 1.5 miles before the end of Forest Road 24. ■

Directions from Eugene:

Follow Hwy. 58 for 40 miles to Oakridge, turn left at the only stop light, turn right onto 1st Street, which becomes FR 24 (Salmon Creek Road). Follow for 21.5 miles to the end of the road.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Shape-shifting is a common theme in fairy tales, says cultural historian Marina Warner in her book From the Beast to the Blonde. "A rusty lamp turns into an all-powerful talisman," for example. "A humble pestle and mortar become the winged vehicle of the fairy enchantress," or a slovenly beggar wearing a dirty donkeyskin transforms into a radiant princess. I foresee metaphorically similar events happening in your life sometime soon, Aries. Maybe they are already under way. Don't underestimate the magic that is possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The technical scientific term for what happens when you get a headache from eating too much ice cream too fast is sphenopalatine ganglioneuralgia. I urge you to be on guard against such an occurrence in the coming week. You should also watch out for other phenomena that fit the description of being too-much-and-too-fast-of-a-good-thing. On the other hand, you shouldn't worry at all about slowly getting just the right amount of a good thing. If you enjoy your pleasures with grace and moderation, you'll be fine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): "Pregreening" is a term for what impatient drivers do as they are waiting at a red light. They partly take their foot off the brake, allowing their car to creep forward, in the hope of establishing some momentum before the light changes to green. I advise you to avoid this type of behavior in the coming week, Gemini — both the literal and the metaphorical variety. Pregreening might make sense by, say, Nov. 15 or 16. But for now, relax and abide.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): German composer Ludwig van Beethoven (1770-1827) was one of the greats. His influence on the evolution of Western music has been titanic, and many of his best compositions are still played today. He was prodigious, too, producing over 350 works. One of the secrets to his high level of energy seems to have been his relationship with coffee. It was an indispensable part of his diet. He was fastidious in its preparation, counting out exactly 60 coffee beans for each cup. I recommend that you summon a similar attention to detail in the coming days. It will be an excellent time to marshal your creative energy and cultivate your lust for life. You will get the best results if you are precise and consistent and focused in your approach.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): By the time we have become young adults, most of us don't remember much about our lives from before the age of 5. As we grow into middle age, more and more childhood memories drop away. Vague impressions and hazy feelings may remain. A few special moments keep burning brightly. But the early events that shaped us are mostly gone. Having said that, I want to alert you to the fact that you are in a phase when you could recover whole swaths of lost memories, both from your formative years and later. Take advantage of this rare window of opportunity to reconnect with your past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Photographer Joel Leindecker can kick himself in the head 127 times in one minute. Guinness World Records affirms that his achievement is unmatched. I'm begging you not to try to top his mark any time soon. In fact, I'm pleading with you not to commit any act of mayhem, chaos, or unkindness against yourself — even if it's done for entertainment purposes. In my view, it's crucial for you to concentrate on caressing yourself, treating yourself nicely, and caring for yourself with ingenious tenderness in the coming weeks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The writing of letters is becoming a lost art. Few people have a long enough attention span to sit down and compose a relaxed, thoughtful report on what they have been doing and thinking. Meanwhile, the number of vigorous, far-reaching conversations is waning, too. Instead, many of us tend to emit and absorb short bursts of information at frequent intervals. But I invite you to rebel against this trend in the coming weeks. Judging from the astrological omens, I believe you would stir up some quietly revolutionary developments by slowing down and deepening the way you communicate with those you care about. You may be amazed by how much richer your experience of intimacy will become.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Near the end of the 19th century, an American named Annie Londonderry became the first woman to ride a bicycle around the world. It was a brave and brazen act for an era when women still couldn't vote and paved roads were rare. Her 15-month journey took her through countries that would be risky for a single woman on a bike to travel through today, like Egypt and Yemen. What made her adventure even more remarkable was that she didn't know how to ride a bike until two days before she departed. I'd love to see you plan a daring exploit like that, Scorpio — even if you do not yet have a certain skill you will need to succeed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): P. G. Wodehouse wrote more than 90 books, as well as numerous plays, musical comedies, and film scripts. When he died at age 93, he was working on another novel. He did not suffer from writer's block. And yet his process was far from effortless. He rarely churned out perfection on his first attempt. "I have never written a novel," he testified, "without doing 40,000 words or more and finding they were all wrong and going back and starting again." The way I see your immediate future, Sagittarius, is that you will be creating your own version of those 40,000 wrong words. And that's OK. It's not a problem. You can't get to the really good stuff without slogging through this practice run.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It's a favorable time for you to meditate intensely on the subject of friendship. I urge you to take inventory of all the relevant issues. Here are a few questions to ask yourself. How good of a friend are you to the people you want to have as your friends? What capacities do you cultivate in your effort to build and maintain vigorous alliances? Do you have a clear sense of what qualities you seek in your cohorts and colleagues? Are you discerning in the way you choose your compatriots, or do you sometimes end up in associations with people you don't truly enjoy and don't have much in common with? If you discover any laziness or ignorance in your approach to the art of friendship, make the necessary fixes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Before the invention of the printing press, books in Europe were handmade. Medieval monks spent long hours copying these texts, often adding illustrations in the margins. There's an odd scene that persistently appears in these illuminated manuscripts: knights fighting snails. Scholars don't agree on why this theme is so popular or what it means. One theory is that the snail symbolizes the "slow-moving tedium of daily life," which can be destructive to our hopes and dreams — similar to the way that literal snails may devour garden plants. In accordance with the cosmic omens, I am bestowing a knighthood on you, Aquarius, so you will be inspired to rise up and defeat your own metaphorical version of the snail.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): To be in righteous alignment with cosmic forces, keep the Halloween spirit alive for another week. You have a license to play with your image and experiment with your identity. Interesting changes will unfold as you expand your notion of who you are and rebel cheerfully against your own status quo. To get started, try this exercise. Imagine that your gangsta name is Butt-Jugglin Smuggla. Your pirate name is Scally-wagger Hornslasher. Your sex-worker name is Saucy Loaf. Your Mexican wrestler name is Ojo Último (Ultimate Eye). Your rock star-from-the-future name is Cashmere Hammer. Or make up your own variations.

SAVAGE LOVE

SPANK U
 BY DAN SAVAGE

Is this even Dan? Probably not, probably an assistant, but maybe this will eventually get to him. I have a spanking fetish. I love to be spanked. I live in Oakland, California, so San Francisco is 10 minutes away. Seems like I'm in one of the best places in the country to have a kink, but I'm having a hard time figuring out where I can find a spanking community. I know there are BDSM clubs, but is there another way I can connect with spanking people? Any suggestions or resources?

Sincerely Panicked And Needing Knowledgeable Mentorship, Edification

This is Dan, SPANKME. I read all my own mail. And I found someone for you—all by my lone-some—who is more qualified than I to answer your question.

"This lady sounds like she needs to be severely punished," Jillian Keenan joked when she read your e-mail. "I'd love to help her get what she deserves!"

Keenan is a very serious journalist who writes about very serious subjects—climate change, economic policy, nuclear proliferation—but she's also a very serious spanking fetishist. She came out about her kink in a Modern Love column in the New York Times ["Finding the Courage to Reveal a Fetish," November 9, 2012], and she's written a series of pieces about kink, consent, and stigma for Slate and other publications. So, SPANKME, where can you find your kink community? Where everybody finds their kink communities these days: online.

"FetLife.com has profiles of more than 300,000 spanking fetishists, including several groups specifically for people in the Bay Area," said Keenan. "FetLife is a good way to chat with people online and ease into the scene. On FetLife, she can also learn about where local spanking enthusiasts go for parties and munches." Munches are informal get-togethers where kinksters meet to talk, not to play. You might connect with a potential playmate at a munch, but you won't be pressured to play right away.

"When she starts to meet potential playmates, the most important thing I can recommend is to be as detailed and honest as possible," said Keenan. "What are her fantasies? Does she want to be spanked with a hand, hairbrush, belt, paddle, or something else? Does she want to call her partner 'sir' or 'ma'am'? Would she prefer a punitive dynamic, or does she fantasize about erotic spankings? Is she excited by any of our kink's side dishes, like standing in a corner, writing lines, being scolded, or getting her mouth washed out with soap? What implements, activities, words, or pain thresholds are absolutely off-limits? Such specific details can feel embarrassing at first, but if she talks about them honestly with a potential partner, it's much more likely that she'll find a good match and have a great experience!"

A safe, responsible, and trustworthy kinkster—the only kind of kinkster you ever want to play with—will agree to meet you in a public place to talk about your kinks and limits before setting up a playdate. If you find yourself talking with someone who refuses to meet prior to playing, SPANKME, they're not a responsible or trustworthy kinkster.

"But great dominants are not rare," said Keenan. "It won't take long to find someone else—someone with whom she'll feel safe. And no matter what she and a potential partner agree on before a scene, she can always change her mind later if something feels uncomfortable. And there is absolutely no shame in using a safe word. So pick a fun one!"

We have a new shorthand term for BDSM doms who are abusive assholes: Ghomeshi doms. Good guys into BDSM should stick this in their online profiles: "I'm a nice, non-Ghomeshi dom looking for a lady who is into..."

Banish Abusive Doms

Jian Ghomeshi is the CBC radio host who was fired last week after three women leveled accusations of sexual assault against him. Eight women have now spoken to the press; two have allowed themselves to be named. Ghomeshi claims that he is into BDSM and that all of these encounters were consensual, BAD, but I don't believe that Ghomeshi is a consensual kinkster. I believe he's a serial abuser who leveraged his fame against the women he assaulted and who is now hiding behind the culture of consent that characterizes responsible BDSM communities and practitioners. So I think it would be a mistake for BDSMers to work his name—even in a negative sense—into their lingo/slang/shorthand, BAD. He's not one of you. He never was. (I wrote two long posts about Ghomeshi on my blog—google my name and his and they pop right up.)

My brother and I married two incredible women. Our wives were good friends before we started dating them. My brother has always been my best friend, so the four of us spend a lot of time together. Recently, a couple of drinks turned into a bunch, and then my wife and sister-in-law started making out. Then they fucked. It was the hottest thing I've ever seen. We ended up pairing off with our respective partners and having sex in the same room. The next morning, the same thing happened again—wives fucked each other, we watched, then we fucked our wives in front of each other—and now my wife tells me that she and her friend would like to date each other. The group sessions would continue. (But no wife-swapping: MW sex between husband and wife only!) Everyone seems on board. I knew my wife was bi before we married, and we've talked before about her having a girlfriend, so I'm fine with that part. It's hot and it feels safe since we all trust each other. I guess my question is: Is this a terrible idea? Is it creepy and/or incestuous to watch your brother fuck his wife? Does this sound like a setup for the messiest breakup ever, or does something like this ever work out long-term?

Brothers Respectfully Aroused Humping Spouses

The exact same things that make this arrangement feel so safe and so logical—your wives were friends before you and your brother married them, the four of you were tight before your wives started fucking each other—will turn this into a screaming nightmare should things go south. If things get messy—if there's one or more conflicts that require taking sides—you and your brother are going to find yourself in positions that make Reverse Cowgirl Bleached Anal Handstand look easy.

Because you're all so close.

But the train has already left the station, BRAHS: Your wives are doing each other, and they'd like to date each other, and you and your brother want to keep watching your wives fuck and then fucking your respective wives in front of each other. I would advise you all to get together for nonalcoholic beverages and for everyone to promise that you will be mature, reasonable, and forgiving adults if/when this—the wives dating, the semi-incestuous [but maritally binary] quad-ways—comes to an end. Agreeing to an amicable breakup in advance of a breakup is no guarantee that things will end amicably, of course, but it improves the odds. As for the incest and long-term angles: Watching your brother fuck someone strikes me as creepy, BRAHS, but it doesn't meet the legal definition of incest. So Yahtzee for you. And while I haven't heard of an arrangement like this working out over the long-term, BRAHS, I've also never heard of an arrangement like this. Some things you expect to work out don't, and some things you don't expect to work out do. Good luck, gang.
